FROM THE

LONDON GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY of JANUARY 31, 1820.

Whitehall, January 31, 1820.

ON Saturday afternoon, at thirty-five minutes past eight o'clock, Our late Most Gracious Sovereign King George the Third, whose strength had gradually declined for some weeks, expired without the least apparent suffering, at His Castle of Windsor, in the eighty-second year of His age and the sixtieth of His reign. No Sovereign ever possessed in a higher degree the veneration and affection of His subjects, and their grief for His loss is only abated by the unhappy malady, which has precluded His Majesty from directing the measures of of His Government during the nine latter years of His glorious reign.

Upon the news of this melancholy event arriving in London, the Lords of the Privy Council assembled yesterday at Carlton-House, and gave orders for proclaiming His present Majesty, who made a most gracious Declaration to them, and caused all the Lords and others of the late King's Privy Council, who were then present, to be sworn of His Majesty's Privy Council.

And this day, about noon, His Majesty was proclaimed; first before Carlton-House, where the Officers of State, Nobility, and Privy Councillors were present, with the Officers of Arms, all being on foot. Then the Officers, being mounted on horseback, the like was done at Charing-Cross, within Temple-Bar, at the end of Wood-Street, in Cheapside, and lastly at the Royal Exchange, with the usual solemnities; the principal Officers of State, a great number of the Nobility, and of other persons of distinction, attending during the whole ceremony.

WHEREAS it hath pleased Almighty God to call to His Mercy Our late Sovereign Lord King George the Third, of Blessed Memory, by whose decease the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland is solely and rightfully come to the High and Mighty Prince George, Prince of Wales; We therefore the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of this Realm, being here assisted with these of His late Majesty's Privy Council, with numbers of other principal Gentlemen of Quality, with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of London, do now hereby, with one voice and consent of tongue and heart, publish and proclaim that the High and Mighty Prince, George Prince

Prince of Wales, is now by the death of Our late Sovereign of Happy Memory, become our only lawful and rightful Liege Lord George the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith. To whom We do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom Kings and Queens do reign, to bless the Royal Prince George the Fourth, with long and happy years to reign over us.

Given at the Court at Carlton-House, this thirtieth day of January one thousand eight hundred and twenty.

At the Court at Carlton-House, the 30th day of January 1820,

PRESENT,

The KING's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

HIS Majesty's being this day present in Council, was pleased to make the following Declaration, viz.

I HAVE directed that you should be assembled here, in order that I may discharge the painful duty of announcing to you the death of the King, My Beloved Father.

It is impossible for Me adequately to express the state of My feelings upon this melancholy occasion, but I have the consolation of knowing, that the severe calamity, with which His Majesty has been afflicted for so many years, has never effaced from the minds of His Subjects the impressions created by His many Virtues; and His Example will, I am persuaded, live for ever in the grateful remembrance of His Country.

Called upon, in consequence of His Majesty's Indisposition, to exercise the Prerogatives of the Crown on His behalf, it was the first wish of My heart to be allowed to restore into His hands the Powers with which I was entrusted. It has pleased Almighty God to determine otherwise; and I have not been insensible to the advantages which I have derived from administering, in My dear Father's name, the Government of this Realm.

The support which I have received from Parliament and the Country, in times the most eventful, and under the most arduous circumstances, could alone inspire Me with that Confidence which My present Station demands.

The experience of the past will, I trust, satisfy all all Classes of My People, that it will ever be My most anxious endeavour to promote their Prosperity and Happiness, and to maintain unimpaired the Religion, Laws, and Liberties of the Kingdom.

Whereupon the Lords of the Council made it their humble request to His Majesty, that this His Majesty's most gracious Declaration to their Lordships might be made public; which His Majesty was pleased to order accordingly. Jas. Buller.

Garter Principal King of Arms, after a short pause, pronounced, near the Grave, the style of His late Most Sacred Majesty, as follows:

" THUS it hath pleased Almighty God to take out of this transitory life, unto His Divine Mercy,
" the late Most High, Most Mighty, and Most Excellent Monarch GEORGE THE THIRD,
" by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of " the Faith, and Sovereign of the Most Noble Order of the Garter; King of Hanover, and Duke
" of Brunswick and Lunenburgh.

" Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and Sovereign of the " Most Noble Order of the Garter; King of Hanover, and Duke of Brunswick and Lunenburgh.

" GOD save KING GEORGE THE FOURTH."

After which the Earl of Winchilsea, Groom of the Stole to His late Majesty, and Chief Officer of the Windsor Establishment, broke his Staff of Office, and, kneeling, deposited the same in the Royal Vault: whereupon His Royal Highness the Chief Mourner, their Royal Highnesses the Princes of the Blood Royal, the Great Officers, Nobility, and others, who had composed the Procession, retired; having witnessed that every part of this most mournful and afflicting Ceremony had been conducted with great regularity, decorum, and solemnity.

A PROCLAMATION,

For the Encouragement of Piety and Virtue, and for the preventing and punishing of Vice, Prophaneness, and Immorality.

GEORGE, R.

WE, most seriously and religiously considering, that it is an indispensable duty on Us to be careful, above all other things, to preserve and advance the honour and service of Almighty God, and to discourage and suppress all Vice, Prophaneness, Debauchery, and Immorality, which are so highly displeasing to God, so great a reproach to Our Religion and Government, and (by means of the frequent ill examples of the practices thereof) have so fatal a tendency to the corruption of many of Our loving subjects, otherwise religiously and virtuously disposed, and which (if not timely remedied) may justly draw down the Divine vengeance on Us and Our Kingdoms; We also humbly acknowledging that We cannot expect the blessing and goodness of Almighty God (by whom Kings reign and on which We entirely rely) to make Our Reign happy and prosperous to Ourself and Our people, without a religious observance of God's holy laws: to the intent, therefore, fore, that Religion, Piety, and Good Manners may (according to Our most hearty desire) flourish and increase under Our Administration and Government, We have thought fit, by the advice of Our Privy Council, to issue this Our Royal Proclamation, and do hereby declare Our Royal purpose and resolution to discountenance and punish all manner of Vice, Prophaneness, and Immorality in all persons of whatsoever degree or quality within this Our Realm, and particularly in such as are employed near Our Royal Person; and that for the encouragement of Religion and Morality, We will upon all occasions distinguish persons of Piety and Virtue, by marks of Our Royal favour; and We do expect and require that all persons of honour or in place of authority will give good example by their own Virtue and Piety, and to their utmost contribute to the discountenancing persons of dissolute and debauched lives, that they being reduced by that means to shame and contempt for their loose and evil actions and behaviour, may be thereby also enforced the sooner to reform their ill habits and practices, and that the visible displeasure of good men towards them may (as far as it is possible) supply what the laws (probably) cannot altogether prevent: and We do hereby strictly enjoin and prohibit all Our loving subjects of what degree or quality soever from playing on the Lord's Day at dice, cards, or any other game whatsoever, either in public or private houses, or other place or places whatsoever; and We do hereby require and command them and every of them decently and reverently to attend the worship of God, on every Lord's Day, on pain of Our highest displeasure, and of being proceeded against with the utmost rigour that may be by law: and for the more effectual reforming all such persons who, by reason of their dissolute lives and conversations are a scandal to Our Kingdom, Our further pleasure is,

is, and We do hereby strictly charge and command all Our Judges, Mayors, Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, and all other Our Officers, and Ministers, both Ecclesiastical and Civil, and all other Our subjects whom it may concern, to be very vigilant and strict in the discovery and the effectual prosecution and punishment of all persons who shall be guilty of excessive drinking, blasphemy, profane swearing and cursing, lewdness, prophanation of the Lord's Day, or other dissolute, immoral, or disorderly practices; and that they take care also effectually to suppress all public gaming houses and places, and other lewd and disorderly houses, and to put in execution the Statute made in the twenty-ninth year of the reign of the late King Charles the Second, intituled "An Act for "the better observation of the Lord's Day, com-"monly called Sunday;" and also so much of an Act of Parliament made in the ninth year of the reign of the late King William the Third, intituled "An Act for the more effectual suppressing of "blasphemy and prophaneness," as is now in force, and all other laws now in force for the punishing and suppressing any of the vices aforesaid; and also to suppress and prevent all gaming whatsoever in public or private houses on the Lord's Day; and likewise that they take effectual care to prevent all persons keeping taverns, chocolate-houses, coffee-houses, or other public houses whatsoever, from selling wine, chocolate, coffee, ale, beer, or other liquors, or receiving or permitting guests to be or remain in such their houses, in the time of Divine Service on the Lord's Day, as they will answer it to Almighty God, and upon pain of Our highest displeasure: And for the more effectual proceeding herein, We do hereby direct and command all Our Judges of Assize and Justices of the Peace to give strict charges at their respective assizes and sessions for the due prosecution and punishment of all persons that shall presume to offend in any of the kinds aforesaid, and also of all persons that, contrary to their duty, shall be remiss or negligent in putting the said laws in execution, and that they do, at their respective assizes and quarter session sof the peace, cause this Our Royal Proclamation to be publicly read in open Court, immediately before the charge is given, and We do hereby further charge and command every Minister in his respective parish church or chapel to read or cause to be read this Our Proclamation, at least four times in every year, immediately after Divine Service, and to incite and stir up their respective auditories to the practice of Piety and Virtue, and the avoiding of all Immorality and Prophaneness: And to the end that all Vice and Debauchery may be prevented, and Religion and Virtue practised by all officers, private soldiers, mariners, and others who are employed in Our service by sea and land; We do hereby strictly charge and command all Our Commanders and Officers whatsoever, that they do take care to avoid all Prophaneness, Debauchery, and other Immoralities, and that by their own good and virtuous lives and conversations, they do set good examples to all such as are under their care and authority, and likewise take care of and inspect the behaviour of all such as are under them, and punish all those who shall be guilty of any the offences aforesaid, as they will be answerable for the ill consequences of their neglect herein.

And one private Bill.

The Speech of the Lords Commissioners to both Houses of Parliament, on Monday, February 28, 1820.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

WE are commanded by His Majesty to inform you, that it is a great disappointment to His Majesty, that on this first and solemn occasion He is prevented by indisposition from meeting you in person.

It would have been a consolation to His Majesty to give utterance in this place to those feelings with which His Majesty and the nation alike deplore the loss of a Sovereign the common Father of all people.

The King commands us to inform you, that in determining to call, without delay, the new Parliament, His Majesty has been influenced by the consideration of what is most expedient for public business, as well as most conducive to general convenience.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

We are directed by His Majesty ro thank you for the provision which you have made for the several branches of the public service from the commencement of the present year, and during the interval which must elapse before a new Parliament can be assembled.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

We are commanded to inform you, that in taking leave of the present Parliament, His Majesty cannot refrain from conveying to you His warmest assurances of the sense which His Majesty entertains of the important services which you have rendered the country.

Deeply as His Majesty lamented that designs and practices such as those which you have been recently called upon to repress should have existed in this free and happy country, He cannot sufficiently commend the prudence and firmness with which you directed your attention to the means of counteracting them.

If any doubt had remained as to the nature of those principles by which the peace and happiness of the nation were so seriously menaced, or of the excesses to which they were likely to lead, the flagrant and sanguinary conspiracy which has lately been detected must open the eyes of the most incredulous, and must vindicate to the whole world the justice and expediency of those measures to which you judged it necessary to resort, in defence of the Laws and Constitution of the kingdom.

Then a commission for proroguing the Parliament was read. After which the Lord Chancellor said;

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

By virtue of His Majesty's commission under the Great Seal, to us and other Lords directed, and now read, we do, in His Majesty's name, and in obedience to His commands, prorogue this Parliament to Monday the 13th day of March next, to be then here holden; and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued to Monday the 13th day of March next.

By the KING.

A PROCLAMATION,

For dissolving the present Parliament, and declaring the Calling of another.

GEORGE, R.

WHEREAS We have thought fit, by and with the advice of Our Privy Council, to dissolve this present Parliament, which stands prorogued to Monday the thirteenth day of March next: We do, for that end, publish this Our Royal Proclamation, and do hereby dissolve the said Parliament accordingly; and the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, and the Commissioners for Shires and Burghs, of the House of Commons, are discharged from their meeting and attendance on the said Monday the thirteenth day of March next. And We being desirous and resolved, as soon as may be, to meet Our people, and to have their advice in Parliament, do hereby make known to all Our loving subjects Our royal will and pleasure to call a new Parliament: And do hereby hereby further declare, that, with the advice of Our Privy Council, We have given order, that Our Chancellor of that part of Our United Kingdom called Great Britain, and Our Chancellor of Ireland, do respectively, upon notice thereof, forthwith issue out writs in due form, and according to Law, for calling a new Parliament. And We do, by this Our Proclamation, strictly command and require the Provost of Edinburgh, and all other the Magistrates of the said city, to take especial care to preserve the peace thereof, during the time of the said election; and to prevent all manner of riots, tumults, disorders, and violence whatsoever. And We strictly charge and command, that this Our Royal Proclamation be duly published at the Market Cross at Edinburgh, and in all the County Towns of Scotland, twenty-five days at least before the time hereby appointed for the meeting of the said Peers to proceed to such election.

Witness Ourself at Westminster, the twenty-ninth day of February one thousand eight hundred and twenty, and in the first year of Our reign.

At the Court at Carlton-House, the 22d of February 1820,

PRESENT,

The KING's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

HIS Majesty, in Council, was this day pleased to appoint Charles Barnett, of Stratton-Park, Esq. to be Sheriff of the county of Bedford, in the room of Sir John Burgoyne, of Sutton, Bart.

And His Majesty was also pleased to make the following amendments upon the roll:

County of Southampton,	James Scotts, Esq. made James Scott, Esq.
Denbigh,	John Lloyd Salisbury, Esq. made John Lloyd Salusbury, Esq.

Carlton-House, February 28, 1820.

THIS day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, and a Deputation of the Aldermen of the City of London, waited upon His Majesty, when Sir John Silvester, Bart. the Recorder, made their compliments of congratulations and condolence in the following Address:

Most Gracious Sovereign,

YOUR Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London, approach your Royal Person, to congratulate your Majesty upon your happy accession to the Imperial Crown of this United Kingdom, and to offer our condolence on the affecting loss which your Majesty and the nation have sustained, in the demise of your Royal Father, our late Most Gracious Sovereign, an event which cannot fail to pierce, with the most affectionate regret, the heart of every subject to the remotest corner of the empire.

Occupying the exalted Throne of these realms for a period unprecedented in the annals of Britain, your venerable Sire held his paternal and gentle sway over the affections of his people, and long will tributary gratitude of this nation record, that during the eventful and glorious course of His late Majesty's reign, wherein it pleased Almighty God, in His inscrutable Providence, to visit him with various public and private afflictions, he manifested on all occasions the most tender regard for his native country, and the most scrupulous affection for her glorious Constitution, both in Church and State; he maintained the honour of his Crown, and the safety and independence of his people, in seasons of unparalleled difficulty, with magnanimity, firmness, and dignity; his pre-eminent example in the strict attention he paid to his religious duties, in his pious submission to the Divine Will, in his faithful discharge of every moral obligation, beamed from his lofty sphere with powerful and attractive lustre; and, while it was a blessing to the country over which he reigned, fitted and prepared him for the exchange he has now made of an earthly for an heavenly Crown.

In thus deploring the loss of the venerable Father of his people, your Majesty's dutiful and faithful subjects have but imperfectly given utterance to the feelings of sympathy which agitate their hearts on this mournful occasion, and they participate most deeply the sorrow of your Majesty on the accumulated occasions of grief which have, in so short a space of time, visited your Royal House.

The consolation which your faithful Citizens of London experience, in common with their fellow subjects, is derived from the good Providence of God, in placing the the Sceptre in the hands of a Prince, by whose wise and able Government (as the representative of our late lamented Sovereign, during his long and distressing illness), we have witnessed the glory of the arms of this country raised to its highest pitch, an honourable peace secured, after the severe struggles of nearly a quarter of a century, to maintain its Independence, its Constitution, and its Religion; it is therefore with the sincerest and warmest veneration we congratulate your Majesty on your ascending the Throne of your ancestors.

Permit us, gracious Sire, to express our warmest assurances of zeal for your Majesty's sacred Person and Government, satisfied as we are that the best interest of this country, in which you have been born and educated, lies nearest your heart. And we fervently pray that the Almighty Disposer of Events, by whom Kings reign, will prosper and prolong your rule over us, that he will guard your Royal Person, Crown, and Dignity, and bless your reign with the zeal, gratitude, and obedience of a faithful and happy people.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I return you my warmest thanks for this loyal and dutiful Address.

"It is highly gratifying to me to receive such a testimony of your feelings of affectionate veneration for the memory of my lamented Father, as well as of attachment to my Person and Government.

"You may rely on my constant solicitude for the welfare and prosperity of the City of London, and for the maintenance of its rights and liberties."

Carlton-House, February 28, 1820.

THIS day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, and a Deputation of the Common Council, of the City of London, waited upon His Majesty with the following Address; which was read by Sir John Silvester, Bart. the Recorder:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The dutiful and loyal Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, humbly approach your Royal presence to express press to your Majesty the feelings of our minds on occasion of the demise of our late most excellent and revered Sovereign, and on the accession of your Majesty to the Throne of these Realms.

Participating in the general sorrow of the country, we feel ourselves deprived of a father and a friend, the recollection of whose virtues, whose bright example, and whose benign Government, will never be obliterated from our hearts.

The high respect manifested by your Majesty's Royal Father for the impartial administration of justice, in rendering the Judges of the land independent of the Crown, is a conspicuous point of admiration to the present, as it will be to future generations.

Throughout the course of a reign, extended beyond that of any of His predecessors, your Majesty's departed Sire never lost sight of the pledge He had given to His faithful subjects, of His determination to promote to the utmost of His power their prosperity and happiness, under the influence whereof He rose above every danger which threatened the dignity or safety of His sacred Person, the honour and security of His Crown, or the independence and welfare of His people, discharged with unvarying fidelity the duties of every social relation, and proved himself the munificent patron of the arts, science, and literature,—the zealous promoter of the education of the poor, and a bountiful supporter of every good work.

In contemplating his long and glorious career we are consoled, under his loss, by reflecting on his uniform illustration of the fact, that a British Monarch may wield the sceptre with advantage to the country, and by his exemplary attention to every relative duty, by his temperance and his piety instruct and edify the poorest of his subjects.

While we desire to bow with reverential submission to the will of Him by whom "King's reign and Princes decree justice," as it regards the sufferings and demise of your Majesty's Royal Father, we derive motives for comfort and for gratitude in the recollection that the Sceptre has not descended to an inexperienced hand; and that, in addition to the review of the past, we have the assurance of your Majesty's Royal word, that it will be the most anxious endeavour of your Majesty to promote the prosperity and happiness of all classes of your people, and to maintain, unimpaired, the religion, laws, and liberties of the kingdom, an assurance whereby your Majesty has fully acknowledged the glorious principles of the Act of Settlement, and recognized the noble features of our excellent Constitution.

We trust your Majesty will graciously accept this earnest of our dutiful and inviolable attachment to your sacred Person and Government, with our humble assurance that your faithful citizens of London, will ever pray to the King of Kings, that your Majesty's reign may be long and prosperous, and that your councils may be directed by a gracious Providence to promote the honour and glory of your Majesty, and the welfare and happiness of your people.

Signed, by order of Court,

Henry Woodthorpe.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I receive with the greatest satisfaction this loyal and affectionate Address.

"You could not have gratified me more, than by the justice which you have rendered to the memory of my revered and lamented Father; and I cordially thank you for the sentiments of dutiful attachment and confidence which you have expressed towards myself.

"You

" You may be assured, that I shall always be desirous to uphold the privileges, and to promote the prosperity of the City of London."

FROM THE

LONDON GAZETTE of APRIL 22, 1820.

Carlton-House, April 20, 1820.

THE following Address of the Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland has been presented to His Majesty, in the Closet, by the Rev. Dr. Macfarlan, Moderator and Minister of Drymen, in the shire of Dumbarton; the Rev. Sir Henry Moncrieff Wellwood, Bart. one of the Ministers of St. Cuthbeots parish, in Edinburgh; the Rev. Dr. Grant and the Rev. Dr. Inglis, Ministers of the city of Edinburgh and Deans of the Chapel Royal; the Rev. Dr. Nicoll, Principal of the United College in the University of St. Andrews and one of the Ministers of St. Andrews; and John Connell, Esq. Procurator of the Church of Scotland and Judge of the High Court of Admiralty in Scotland:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The loyal and dutiful Address of the Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the Commission of the General Assembly of our National Church, beg leave to approach your Majesty, for the purpose of expressing those mingled sentiments of condolence and congratulation, which have been so naturally excited in our hearts by the death of our late most gracious Sovereign, and by your Majesty's most auspicious accession to the Throne of your Ancestors.

We should be altogether unworthy of such blessings as we anticipate under your Majesty's reign, if we could cease to cherish and honour the memory of your Majesty's illustrious and beloved Father, and of the blessings which we so long enjoyed under his mild and paternal Government. With the exception of a few individuals, we were born under the reign of our late King, we were encouraged to regard ourselves as his children, and that filial reverence for His Person and Government, with which we were inspired in our early years, has incorporated itself with every sentiment which we have since adopted, and with every habit which we have acquired. With the strongest feelings of both gratitude and reverence, we look back to a period, when the wisdom and energy of our late Sovereign's Counsels were successfully opposed to a lawless spirit, which threatened to subvert our invaluable Institutions; and when his personal virtues, more especially, proved themselves the best security of both the Altar and the Throne. Instead of trusting for support to exalted station, it was his glory to adorn the station which he filled, and to impart stability to the Throne on which Providence had placed him. Under his reign, we also beheld such a rapid improvement in all the arts of life as appears to constitute a new era in the progress of civilized society and tracing such improvements, in a great measure, to his protection and fostering care, we now regard them as his legacy to future generations.

Great as these national blessings have been, our duty to the memory of our late King, would be mournful indeed, if our recollections of him and of his reign were not accompanied with cheering prospects in the reign which has now commenced. But in this respect, we have such an advantage as has seldom fallen to the lot of any nation. Your Majesty's deportment as a ruler, is not new to your people. We have already beheld your Majesty when in the exercise of a delegated authority, persevering in such counsels and following out such measures, as have been eminently instrumental in the hand of God, for restoring peace to the nations of the earth; we have seen that most desirable object accomplished, upon terms more favourable to our interests as a nation, than our minds could with reason have anticipated, and we have also observed with delight, that by a conduct firm and determined, yet mild and temperate, your Majesty has effectually counteracted every attempt to disturb our domestic tranquility.

It is impossible that, in these circumstances, we should not feel it a high gratification to present this first tender of our fealty and allegiance to your Majesty, as the Sovereign of the British empire. We beg leave to assure your Majesty, that we shall not cease to cherish, in the people committed to our spiritual charge, every sentiment of duty and attachment to your Majesty and your illustrious House; and we humbly trust that, among all the subjects of your Majesty's Government, there can be none whose loyalty may be more safely relied on than that of the great body of the people of Scotland.

We have perfect confidence in the pledge, which we have received of your Majesty's determination to maintain and protect our national Church in the enjoyment of all its rights and privileges; we regard your Majesty's Proclamation for the encouragement of piety and virtue and for the preventing and punishing of vice, profaneness, and immorality as an earnest of continued and effectual support to the cause of religion. We look to your Majesty for every blessing which a loyal and affectionate people can derive from the reign of a patriot King; and we entreat your Majesty to rely on our inviolable fidelity to both your Person and Government.

Most deeply were we affected by the accounts, which we received of your Majesty's late dangerous indisposition, and most devoutly have we rendered thanks to that Great Being, on whom all depend for your Majesty's happy recovery.

That Almighty God in His great loving kindness to your Majesty, and to the people over whom you reign, may now be pleased to establish your health; that He may richly endow your Majesty with all spiritual and temporal blessings; that your Majesty may long reign in the hearts of a free and loyal people, and that your Majesty may at length exchange an earthly for a Heavenly Crown, are the sincere prayers of, may it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most loyal, most faithful and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence and at our appointment,

Duncan Macfarlan, Moderator.

Edinburgh, March 1st, 1820.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I receive with the utmost satisfaction this testimony of loyal and grateful respect for the memory of My revered Father, and of zealous attachment to My Person and Government.

"The Church of Scotland may confidently rely on My constant support and protection."

Carlton-House, April 8, 1820.

This day had audience of His Majesty, His Excellency the Duke de San Carlos, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary from His Majesty the King of the Spains, to deliver letters from his Sovereign in reply to communications respecting the death of His late Majesty, and of His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent; His Excellency the Prince de Castelcicala, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary from the King of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, on a special embassy, to deliver letters from his Sovereign congratulating His Majesty upon His Majesty's accession to the Throne; Baron Just, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the King of Saxony, to deliver his new credentials and letters from his Sovereign, in reply to communications respecting the death of His late Majesty, and of His Royal Highness the Duke

Duke of Kent; Count de Ludolf, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the King of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, to deliver his new credentials; Baron de Bjornstjerna, on a special mission from the King of Sweden, to take leave of His Majesty, previously to his returning to Sweden; Count Moltke, charged with a special mission from the King of Denmark, to deliver letters from his Sovereign, congratulating His Majesty on His Majesty's accession to the Throne; General Count Lewaschell, charged with a special mission from the Emperor of All the Russias, to deliver letters from his Sovereign, congratulating His Majesty upon His Majesty's accession to the Throne; to which several audiences the said Ambassadors and Ministers were respectively introduced by Lord Viscount Castlereagh, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and conducted by Sir Robert Chester, Knt. Master of the Ceremonies.

Carlton-House, April 20, 1820.

FROM THE

LONDON GAZETTE of APRIL 29, 1820.

Lord Chamberlain's-Office, April 29, 1820.

NOTICE is hereby given, that His Majesty will hold a Levee at Carlton-House, on Wednesday the 10th of May next, at two o'clock.

Carlton-House, April 27, 1820.

THIS day His Majesty proceeded in state from Carlton-House to the House of Peers, where he arrived at a quarter before two o'clock; and, having alighted from the state coach, he was received at the portico by the Great Officers and others, and proceeded to the robing room in the customary manner; His Majesty was there robed, his hat on his head, and the procession moved into the House in the usual order.

His Majesty being seated on the Throne, the Great Officers and others standing on the right and left, Sir Thomas Tyrwhitt, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, was sent with a message from His Majesty to the House of Commons, commanding their attendance in the House of Peers. The Commons being come thither accordingly, His Majesty was pleased to deliver the following most gracious Speech to both Houses of Parliament:

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

I HAVE taken the earliest occasion of assembling you here, after having recurred to the sense of My people.

In meeting you personally for the first time since the death of my beloved Father, I am anxious to assure you that I shall always continue to imitate his great example in unceasing attention to the public interests, and in paternal solicitude for the welfare and happiness of all classes of My subjects.

I have received from Foreign Powers renewed assurances of their friendly disposition, and of their earnest desire to cultivate with Me the relations of peace and amity.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

The estimates for the present year will be laid before you.

They have been framed upon principles of strict economy; but it is to Me a matter of the deepest regret that the state of the country has not allowed Me to dispense with those additions to our military force which I announced at the commencement of the last Session of Parliament.

The

The first object to which your attention will be directed is the provision to be made for the support of the Civil Government, and of the honour and dignity of the Crown.

I leave entirely at your disposal My interest in the hereditary revenues; and I cannot deny Myself the gratification of declaring, that so far from desiring any arrangement which might lead to the imposition of new burthens upon My people, or even might diminish, on My account, the amount of the reductions incident to My accession to the Throne, I can have no wish, under circumstances like the present, that any addition whatever should be made to the settlement adopted by Parliament in the year 1816.

My Lords, and Gentlemen,

Deeply as I regret that the machinations and designs of the disaffected should have led, in some parts of the country, to acts of open violence and insurrection, I cannot but express My satisfaction at the promptitude with which those attempts have been suppressed by the vigilance and activity of the Magistrates, and by the zealous co-operation of all those of My subjects whose exertions have been called forth to support the authority of the Laws.

The wisdom and firmness manifested by the late Parliament, and the due execution of the Laws, have greatly contributed to restore confidence throughout the kingdom; and to discountenance those principles of sedition and irreligion which had been disseminated with such malignant perseverance, and had poisoned the minds of the ignorant and unwary.

I rely upon the continued support of Parliament in My determination to maintain, by all the means entrusted to My hands, the public safety and tranquillity.

De-

Deploring, as We all must, the distress which still unhappily prevails among many of the labouring classes of the community, and anxiously looking forward to its removal or mitigation, it is in the mean time Our common duty, effectually to protect the loyal, the peaceable, and the industrious, against those practices of turbulence and intimidation, by which the period of relief can only be deferred, and by which the pressure of the distress has been incalculably aggravated.

I trust that an awakened sense of the dangers which they have incurred, and of the arts which have been employed to seduce them, will bring back by far the greater part of those who have been unhappily led astray, and will revive in them that spirit of loyalty, that due submission to the laws, and that attachment to the Constitution, which subsist unabated in the hearts of the great body of the people, and which, under the blessing of Divine Providence, have secured to the British nation the enjoyment of a larger share of practical freedom, as well as of prosperity and happiness, than have fallen to the lot of any nation in the world.

At the Court at Carlton-House, the 26th of April 1820,

PRESENT,

The KING's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

HIS Majesty having been pleased to appoint William Earl of Craven to be Lord Lieutenant of the county of Berks, his Lordship this day took the oaths appointed to be taken thereupon, instead of the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy.

Presence, being preceded by His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, and supported by the Earl Cathcart and the Earl of Abergavenny. Upon entering into His Majesty's presence, with the usual reverences, the Marquess of Lothian was presented by the said Knights, and, kneeling down, was knighted by the King with the sword of state; his Lordship, having kissed His Majesty's hand, rose up, when the Gentleman Usher of the Green Rod administered the oath to his Lordship; then Green Rod, kneeling, presented the ensigns of the Order, upon a crimson velvet cushion, to the King, who put the ribband over the Marquess's left shoulder; and his Lordship, having again had the honour of kissing His Majesty's hand, withdrew in the same manner in which he had entered.

The ceremony was performed in the King's closet, several of the Great Officers of State and of the Court being present.

Mr. Professor Buckland, and many other Noblemen and Gentlemen who were educated at the University, waited upon His Majesty, to present to His Majesty the following Address :

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford, beg leave most humbly to approach your Majesty's Throne, with the expression of those mingled feelings which are naturally excited in our breasts, on the one hand by the heavy loss which we have sustained, and on the other by our sense of the manner in which that loss is supplied.

The event which we deplore, whilst it has involved your Majesty in domestic affliction, has deprived our fellow subjects and ourselves of a Monarch whom we had long venerated, not only as the Sovereign, but as the Father of his people. We had fully shared in the general benefits of a mild and paternal reign, and we had moreover to acknowledge many and peculiar acts of favour and protection. More ample means were afforded to us for the cultivation of science; our public repositories of literature were enriched, and we were ourselves repeatedly encouraged and excited to the discharge of our duties by the indulgent notice and animating presence of our Sovereign.

Under such circumstances it is the greatest of all consolations to us to reflect that we have already similar expressions of gratitude to add to the homage of our humble duty, which we now presume to offer to your Majesty, on the auspicious event of your Majesty's accession to the Throne of your ancestors. We are already taught, not by hope, but by experience, to anticipate from your Majesty's reign the continuance of the same munificent and royal patronage. Under your Majesty's auspices existing provisions for the promotion of learning have been enlarged; institutions called for by new discoveries in science have been created; relicks of ancient literature recovered by persevering exertions, made under the same auspices, have been confided to our care; and at a moment when the Sovereigns of Europe proclaimed, by their visit to this country, their sense of the services rendered by your Majesty to the great cause, in which the happiness of the whole civilized world was involved, your Majesty raised us in the consideration of foreign countries as well as of our own, by deigning to exhibit your University of Oxford to the deliverers of Europe as among the objects of British institution most worthy of their attention and regard.

For these acts of condescension and grace we are indebted, as we have always felt, to the influence with which your Majesty considers our institutions as operating on those great interests of morality and religion, which are inseparably connected with the welfare of the community. We shall never we trust be insensible to the augmented responsibility which thus rests upon us; and whilst your Majesty's subjects at large will, as we confidently hope, see fresh cause to acknowledge, as they already had ample means of knowing, that with the Sceptre of this realm your Majesty inherits the disposition, as well as the power, to uphold the interests of your people in freedom and happiness, in security and peace, your Majesty's University of Oxford will labour to promote by diligent and unremitting exertion the diffusion of those prin-principles of allegiance, subordination and loyalty, by which your Majesty's endeavours for the public welfare may best be aided and supported.

And we make it our earnest prayer to Almighty God, that for a long succession of ages, your Majesty and your illustrious House, may continue to maintain unimpaired the freedom, the glory, and the happiness of the United Kingdom.

Given, at our House of Convocation, this 15th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1820.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I receive this loyal and dutiful Address with the greatest satisfaction, both on account of the tribute of veneration and gratitude, so justly offered to the memory of my lamented Father, and of the feelings of confidence and attachment so strongly manifested towards myself.

"The University of Oxford may rely on my constant favour and protection.

"I am fully convinced that the maintenance of their wise and ancient institutions, is essential to the support and advancement of sound learning, morality, and religion, and to the stability of our happy Constitution in Church and State."

Calvert, B D. Norrisian Professor; Reverend S. Lee, M. A. Professor of Arabic; Reverend J. H. Monk, Professor of Greek; and M. Lawson, M. A. M. P Magdalen College, waited upon His Majesty to present to His Majesty the following Address:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, beg leave to express to your Majesty the feelings excited in our minds by the awful event which has terminated the reign of our late beloved and revered Monarch, and placed your Majesty upon the Throne of your Ancestors.

To describe in adequate terms the deep and universal sentiment of respect and affection with which,

in

in common with the whole nation, we have for so many years regarded the Person of our late Sovereign. To represent in language worthy of the subject, the public virtues which distinguished his reign, and the private worth which rendered him a pattern of excellence to all his subjects, would far exceed our ability; if the fulness of our own hearts, and respect for your Majesty's filial sorrows, would allow us to enlarge upon so affecting a topic.

May it suffice for us to say, that we are fully sensible of the blessings we have enjoyed under his paternal sway; and that we shall ever cherish his memory with a reverential attachment to his name, and gratitude to that Providence, under which he so long continued our protector.

After this tribute of duty and respect to our departed Sovereign, permit us to assure your Majesty of the sincere joy and thankfulness which we feel, in seeing the sceptre of your Royal Progenitors in the hands of your Majesty. The calamity which for so many years deprived us of the personal exercise of the Royal Functions, has given your Majesty the most ample and intimate knowledge of the Government of the country. We have thus in a new reign, the advantage of relying not only on the hopes excited by your Majesty's character and talents, but on the experience we have already had of their exercise in the conduct of affairs.

That your Majesty may be preserved during many years in health and happiness, is the sincere prayer of all your Majesty's subjects; never more anxiously testified, that while your late indisposition excited the lively apprehensions of the whole nation.

May your Majesty, under the blessing of Providence, be enabled long to maintain your kingdom in security and prosperity; and to preserve the peace and tranquillity of the world, which has been so happily atchieved and consolidated under your Majesty's counsels.

We

We are most anxious to assure your Majesty that none of your subjects are more sincerely devoted to your Person and Government than your University of Cambridge. Distinguished as we have been by so many marks of favour and protection from the Princes of the Brunswick Line, we should be most ungrateful if we did not regard it with feelings of peculiar attachment. Convinced as we are that the security of our establishment in Church and State depends (under Providence) on the preservation of your Majesty's Royal House, we must ever pray for its welfare and support.

With regard to our peculiar duties, we are well aware how deeply responsible we are for the principles communicated to the rising generation through the medium of our Institutions: and we shall continue to make it our anxious study and endeavour, that among the most important lessons of virtue, honour, and religion instilled into their minds, shall ever be included the duties of loyalty and fidelity to your Majesty's Person and Government.

Given under our common seal the 15th February 1820.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I thank you for this loyal and dutiful Address.

"It is highly gratifying to me to receive such a testimony of the affectionate veneration of the University of Cambridge, for the memory of my lamented Father, and of their firm and zealous attachment to my Person and Government.

"Fully convinced, as I am, of the powerful and salutary influence of your Academical Institutions on the best interests of the nation, I shall always feel the utmost satisfaction in encouraging and supporting them by my favour and protection."

Carlton-House, April 28, 1820.

THIS day the following Address of the Bishop of London, Dean and Chapter of Saint Paul's, and Clergy of the Cities of London and Westminster was presented to His Majesty by the Bishop of London, attended by the Bishops of Lincoln and Landaff; the Archdeacons of the Diocese; the Honourable and Reverend Dr. Wellesley, Canon of St. Paul's; the Reverend Dr. Goddard, and other Prebendaries of St. Paul's; the President of Sion College; the Deans of Canterbury and Carlisle, and about eighty other Clergy of the Cities of London and Westminster.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the Bishop of London, the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls, and the Clergy of the Cities of London and Westminster, most humbly request permission to lay at your Majesty's feet our expressions of sincere condolence on the death of our late most excellent Sovereign, and our hearty assurances of fidelity and loyalty to your Majesty's Person and Government.

In contemplating the melancholy event which has deprived your Majesty of a beloved Father, we look back with affection and reverence to the personal virtues, the political rectitude, and the steady attachment to our ancient laws and institutions, which gave lustre and stability to the Throne and security and confidence to the people in times of extreme danger.

With these feelings impressed on our hearts, we turn our eyes to your Majesty with sentiments of consolation and hope and, with our dutiful congratulations on the happy event of your Majesty's accession cession to the Throne, we humbly venture to mingle our grateful acknowledgements of the blessings enjoyed by the country while the Royal Authority was exercised by your Majesty in the name of your venerable Parent.

Entrusted with the care of the religion and morals of these great cities, and feeling the importance of your Majesty's support and protection to the success of our labours, we have seen with the liveliest gratitude the measures which have recently been taken, under your Majesty's sanction, for the promotion of public worship and the discouragement of immorality and profaneness.

These public demonstrations of your Majesty's sentiments we consider as an irresistible call for corresponding exertions on our part; and we venture to assure your Majesty, that, conscious of the awful responsibility attached to our charge, we shall make it the aim of our lives to give effect to your Majesty's pious intentions, and accomplish, to the utmost of our power, the peculiar objects of our vocation.

To these humble expressions of duty we add our earnest prayers that your Majesty may long continue to reign in health, in peace and in honour, secured by the blessing of heaven and the love of your subjects from foreign hostility and domestic commotion, and resting the pillars of your Government on the solid foundations of national piety and virtue.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I thank you for this testimony of your veneration for the memory of my beloved Father, and of your faithful and loyal attachment to my Person and Government.

"At no period has a strict and assiduous discharge of your important duties been more urgently necessary than at the present; and I have the highest satisfaction in believing that they are, in general, performed with ability, zeal and diligence. You may be fully assured of my cordial encouragement and constant protection, convinced, as I am, that upon the conduct of the Clergy throughout the United Kingdom, and upon their unceasing exertions in the cause of sound morality and pure religion, the welfare and prosperity of the community must in a great measure depend."

The principal Clergy were presented to His Majesty by the Bishop of London, and had the honour to kiss His Majesty's hand. They were all most graciously received.

Whitehall, May 2, 1820.

His Majesty has been pleased to nominate and appoint Mr. John Welsh to the office of Commissary of the Commissariat of Peebles, void by the death of Mr. John Murray Robertson.

Mr. Alderman Birch, Mr. Alderman Christopher Smith, Mr. Alderman Heygate, Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Rothwell, Matthew Wilson, Esq. and Randle Jackson, Esq. Commissioners of Lieutenancy for the City of London, waited on His Majesty, and being introduced to His Majesty by Viscount Sidmouth, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, Edward Grose Smith, Esq. the Secretary, made their compliments of congratulation and condolence in the following Address:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and the rest of your Majesty's Commissioners of Lieutenancy for the City of London.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and the rest of your Majesty's Commissioners of Lieutenancy for the City of London, beg leave to approach your Majesty, with our earnest and sincere congratulations on your Ma-

Majesty's accession to the Imperial Throne of this United Kingdom

We humbly offer at the same time expressions of the deepest sorrow for the loss of our late revered Sovereign King George the Third, a loss which the whole empire poignantly feels, and sympathy in which cannot but pervade the civilized world, which has long beheld his virtues with still greater admiration, if possible, than it has contemplated the splendid glory of his reign.

In a situation so afflicting permit us, Sire, to rest our hope and consolation on those Princely virtues which have been so conspicuous during the period in which your Majesty has exercised the functions of Royalty, as Regent of the realm.

While we reverentially and proudly do homage to you as our King, we beseech your Majesty to pardon us, if we cannot forbear from blending with these our solemn pledges of loyalty and allegiance, the endearing recollection of a life spent among Englishmen, in continued acts of grace, kindness, and condescension towards those, whose future ambition it will be to evince themselves the inflexibly faithful subjects of so great and powerful a Monarch.

By order of Court,
Edwd. Grose-Smith, Clerk.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I thank you for this loyal and affectionate Address.

"I am highly gratified by the just sense which you have expressed, of the virtues of my beloved and lamented Father, and by such a testimony of your attachment to myself."

They were all received very graciously, and had the honour to kiss His Majesty's hand.

Farrant, Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the Three Denominations, were introduced to the King by Viscount Sidmouth, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and and presented the following Address of condolence and congratulation to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty KING GEORGE the Fourth.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the Three Denominations in and about the Cities of London and Westminster, approach your Majesty, with profound respect, to express our sincere condolence on occasion of the breaches made by death in your illustrious House, and more especially on the demise of our late venerable and beloved Sovereign, your Royal Father, as well as our cordial congratulations on your Majesty's accession to the Throne of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

We partake of the satisfaction which His late Majesty's subjects in general, and his own illustrious Family in particular, must have experienced in the extended duration of his life and reign; and whilst we lament the personal affliction which, during his latter years, deprived the nation of his public services, we bow with devout resignation to the mysterious will of Almighty God; and we reflect with pleasure on the filial attention manifested by your Majesty and the other branches of his Family to his dignity and to his comfort during his seclusion from the duties and enjoyments of social life.

We also render to the Supreme Arbiter of the condition of man our unfeigned thanksgivings, that his dissolution succeeded a gentle and gradual decay, without any previous suffering.

Among numerous other virtues that distinguished his character and reign, his solicitude for the education of the poor, and for the diffusion of those Scriptures which open, both to rich and poor, the best best sources of instruction and comfort, will be recorded in future ages to the praise of our much revered Sovereign.

As Protestant Dissenters we recollect, with peculiar thankfulness, that, conformably to the declaration with which His late Majesty commenced his reign, he not only maintained the Toleration inviolate, but enlarged its protection and benefits.

We should the more deeply lament the decease of our late Sovereign, if we were not warranted to direct our views to your Majesty as his successor, and to assure ourselves, by the experience afforded us during your Regency, that you will continue to us the same protection and similar benefits.

It is, we trust, needless for us to make any public avowal of our attachment to your Majesty's Person and Family, and the form of Government established in the British realms.

Whilst we are ambitious of expressing ourselves the invariable friends of civil and religious liberty, we are no less the enemies of every kind and degree of licentiousness, both in principle and practice.

As none of our number were ever degraded by hostility to the Civil Government of our country, as it is by law established, we are persuaded that none of us will be found amongst those who profane religion, deride the Holy Scriptures, and diminish the influence of sacred subjects on the minds of the people; but that it will be our uniform solicitude and endeavour to manifest and to inculcate a due regard to religion, to the Constitution and laws of our country, and to the honour and tranquillity of your Majesty's life and reign.

Thus avowing our principles and conduct, we humbly solicit, and feel confident of enjoying, your Majesty's protection and favour: Prompted, as we are, by inclination as well as duty, it will be always our earnest wish and ardent prayer, that your Majesty's reign may be long, peaceful, and prosperous; and that, at a distant period, your Majesty may exchange your present Crown, after having exhibited its brightest lustre in the uninterrupted and increasing attachment of a free, grateful, and loyal people, for a Crown of celestial glory that fadeth not away.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I receive with great satisfaction this loyal and dutiful Address.

"The justice which you have rendered to the memory of my beloved Father, is highly gratifying to me. You may be fully assured of the continuance of that protection which you experienced during his beneficent reign, and my determination to maintain strictly and inviolably the toleration now so happily enjoyed."

They were all received very graciously, and had the honour to kiss the King's hand.

Carlton-House, May 3, 1820.

THIS day Messrs. Joseph Foster, Thomas Howard, William Forster, John Fell, Josiah Messer, Richard Phillips, John Colcby, Luke Howard, John Eliot, Josiah Forster, Samuel Gurney, and Jacob Hagen, on behalf of the People called Quakers, waited on His Majesty with their Address, and being introduced by Viscount Sidmouth, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, Mr. Joseph Foster presented the same to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously:

To

To George the Fourth, KING of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Dominions thereto belonging.

May it please the King,

WE, thy dutiful subjects of the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers, are anxious to avail ourselves of the occasion of thy accession to the Throne, to renew the testimony of a faithful attachment to our King.

In thus conveying an assurance of sincere obedience on the part of a Christian people, we desire permission also to express the deep concern and sympathy we have felt under the afflictive events which of late have marked the dispensations of Divine Providence to the King, the Royal Family, and (through their necessary heartfelt interest therein) the people at large of the United Kingdom. May the All-Wise God sanctify these afflictions with every act of His Providence to the King and his subjects for their good.

To feelings like these there is abundant cause that we should unite a grateful remembrance of our late beloved Sovereign thy Father, a Prince conspicuous for his love to religion and virtue, and to whom our Society is deeply indebted for the protection uniformly extended to it, in the profession and practice of Christian principles dear to our predecessors in the same faith, and which remain dear to us. And whilst in the Royal Presence, on behalf of a religious body, we would further respectfully avow our conviction that it is righteousness which exalteth a nation, and with the warm feelings of Christian love express our fervent desire, that the hearts of the King and his Council may be ever turned to the Lord Almighty in humble reliance upon Him for wisdom and strength. Thus may thy reign be a blessing to these nations distinguished alike by the continuance of a pacific policy abroad, and by tranquillity, union, and the support of every Christian and beneficent undertaking at home; and mayst thou, our King, living in the divine fear, be prepared by the mercy of God in Christ Jesus our Lord, and through faith in the efficacy of His saving power, for a final inheritance among purified spirits in the realms of Eternal Bliss.

Signed in a meeting representing the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers, in Great Britain, held in London the 6th of the 3d month 1820.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I am much gratified by the feelings of grateful remembrance manifested towards my lamented Father in this loyal and dutiful Address, as well as by the assurance of your faithful attachment to myself. You may depend upon my constant protection."

They were all most graciously received by His Majesty.

N. B. It should have been stated in the Gazette of Tuesday last, that the Delegates who waited upon His Majesty with Addresses from the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, were most graciously received, and had the honour of kissing His Majesty's hand.

IN pursuance of the directions of an Act, passed in the twenty-fourth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to repeal so much of two "Acts, made in the tenth and fifteenth years "of the reign of His present Majesty, as au- "thorises the Speaker of the House of Commons "to issue his warrants to the Clerk of the Crown "for making out writs for the election of Mem- "bers to serve in Parliament in the manner "therein mentioned; and for substituting other "provisions for the like purposes:"

I do hereby nominate and appoint the Right Honourable Sir William Scott, Knt. the Right Honourable Charles Bathurst, the Right Honourable Sir John Nicholl, Knt. the Right Honourable Robert Peel, Henry Bankes, Esq. William Wilberforce, Esq. and John Fane, Esq. being Members of the House of Commons, or any one of them, to issue warrants to the Clerk of the Crown, in the cases in the said Act specified.

Given under my hand and seal, the 4th day of May 1820,

CHARLES MANNERS SUTTON, Speaker.

Given at Our Court at Carlton-House, this sixth day of May one thousand eight hundred and twenty, and in the first year of Our reign.

Carlton-House, May 6, 1820.

THIS day the following Address of the Archbishop, Bishops, and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, in Convocation assembled, was presented to His Majesty by His Grace the Lord Archbishop, attended by the Right Reverend the Bishops of London, Worcester, Salisbury, Exeter, Gloucester and Landaff; the Reverend the Dean of Westminster; the Archdeacons of St. Albans, Worcester, Canterbury, and London, and several other Members, being introduced to the King by the Lord Chamberlain:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful subjects, the Archbishop, Bishops and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, in Convocation assembled, approach your Majesty with sentiments of profound humility and veneration.

In addressing your Majesty on the present occasion, it is not permitted us to pass over in silence the great loss which your Majesty and your people have sustained in the death of our late venerable Sovereign. During a reign of unexampled length, pregnant with events that threatened, not only the prosperity of this mighty empire, but the existence of the civilized world, it was the steady and fixed purpose of your Royal Father to maintain in their full vigour the principles of our free Constitution, to assert the just prerogatives of the Crown, to preserve inviolate the rights and liberties of the people, to give additional security to the independent administration of public justice, and to illustrate by bright example the blessings of public and private virtue. Nor, Sir, can we for a moment forget the watchful solicitude with which His Majesty, under a system of unbounded toleration, upheld the established Church in its strength and purity.

By these means, Sir, your Majesty's Royal Father bound in indissoluble ties, not only the loyalty, but the affections of his people to his Person and Throne.

Your Majesty in exercising for many years the royal authority in the name of your beloved Father, has given ample proof of your gracious intention to imitate his great example; and we look with confidence to the continuance of those blessings which necessarily result from a devoted attachment on the part of the Crown, to the constitutional government of this country, and on the part of the people, to the just authority, dignity and honour of the Crown.

It is our duty, Sir, and we trust we have not been unmindful of it, to cultivate a devout regard to our holy religion, to oppose every dangerous error, and to teach every needful truth, to maintain among your people that preference to the pure and simple worship of the established Church which has hitherto prevailed, to recommend in all matters of conscience mutual forbearance and forgiveness, and to repress so far as we are able, those religious excesses and wild extravagancies which the mildness of our laws, and the lenity of their execution occasionally produce.

We pray God to bless and to protect your Majesty.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"My Lords, and the rest of the Clergy,

"I receive with great satisfaction this loyal and dutiful Address.

"You have adverted, in a manner highly grateful to my feelings, to the exemplary virtues of my beloved and lamented Father, whose reign, marked as it was by a constant solicitude for the true interest and welfare of all his people, was eminently distinguished by a steady maintenance of the purity of our Established Church, and an uniform support of the principles of an enlightened toleration.

"It will ever be my wish and endeavour to tread in his steps; and I am persuaded that, impressed with a deep sense of the sacred duties which you have to discharge, you will, on your part, sedulously cultivate and cherish that reverence for Religion, and that obedience to its holy dictates, which constitute the only solid foundation of individual and national happiness."

They were all received very graciously, and had the honour to kiss His Majesty's hand.

Carlton-House, May 6, 1820.

said Order, Secretary; and Captain Edwards, Aid-de-Camp to Sir T. Maitland, G. C. B., Grand Master of the Order; and His Majesty's Lord High Commissioner in the Ionian Islands, was introduced to His Majesty upon the Throne, by the Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's Household and His Majesty's Master of the Ceremonies, to deliver an Address from the United States of the Ionian Islands, on His Majesty's accession to the Throne; after which, His Majesty was most graciously pleased to invest the Senator Zavo with the ensigns of a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, which were presented by Sir George Nayler, King of Arms of the Order, on a crimson velvet cushion.

Carlton-House, July 19, 1820.

THIS day the Most Excellent Senator Zavo, and the Most Noble the Chevalier Petrizzopulo, Commissioners Extraordinary from the independant Government of the United States of the Ionian Islands, accompanied by the Right Honourable the Earl of Guildford, Chancellor of the Ionian University; Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Frederick Hankey, Secretary; and Captain Edwards, Aide-de-Camp to His Excellency the Right Honourable Licutenant-General Sir Thomas Maitland, His Majesty's Lord High Commissioner in the Ionian Islands, waited upon the King to present an Address in the Greek language, of which the following is a translation:

May it please your Majesty,

YOUR Majesty sees before you a Member of the Senate, in which is lodged the executive Government of the Ionian Islands, and a Member of the the Legislature of that country, who are sent as an extraordinary Deputation to express to your Majesty how sincerely the Ionian people condole with your Majesty on the occasion of the death of your Majesty's much lamented and august Father, and to congratulate your Majesty on your accession to the Throne of your Royal Ancestors; the high renown of which was at no time more splendid than whilst as Regent, your Majesty wielded the sceptre of this great empire.

It was during that period that your Majesty extended to our Islands the powerful protection of this flourishing kingdom, and ratified that free and independent Constitution which has given universal satisfaction to the people; in whose name we are directed humbly to offer to your Majesty (their sole and exclusive protector), assurances of the most grateful and devoted attachment.

It is by their desire we seize this opportunity of informing your Majesty, that the Ionians in their present condition enjoy a degree of happiness and security, for centuries unknown to them; and that they look forward with the brightest hope, through the unceasing paternal solicitude of your Majesty, to a state of prosperity, unparalelled even in those remote periods, when our Island figured so extensively in the history of the world.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I thank you for the expressions of attachment to my Person and Government, which you have been authorised to make to me on behalf of the Ionian people.

"You may rely upon my making their happiness the object of my anxious care; I feel that this can only be secured by an effective adherence to the Constitution, established under the exclusive pro-

protection of my late Royal Father; it will therefore be my endeavour so to exercise the powers which have devolved upon me, as Protecting Power of the States, as to give to their existing institutions that stability and permanence calculated to ensure to them the respect of foreign Powers, to promote their domestic and commercial prosperity, and to open a prospect of future welfare, not inferior to that enjoyed by them at the most brilliant period of their history.

SUPPLEMENT

TO THE

LONDON GAZETTE of AUGUST 29, 1820.

India-Board, August 30, 1820.

THE following are copies and extracts of dispatches, reports, and General Orders concerning military operations in India, in the year 1819, which did not arrive in the regular course of the dates.

Extract from a Letter from Mr. Strachey, Chief Secretary to the Government of Madras, to the Secretary of the East India Company, dated May 26, 1819.

I AM directed, by the Right Honourable the Governor in Council, to transmit to you the inclosed reports from Brigadier-General Doveton, of his operations against Asseerghur, and of the unconditional surrender* of that fortress.

I am further desired to forward a copy of a letter from the Adjutant-General of the army, of the 22d instant, with a report from Brigadier-General Pritzler, of his operations before Copauldroog.†.

* The surrender of Asseerghur was notified in the Gazette of August 27, 1819, page 1533, 4.

† A fortress on the S. W. frontiers of the Nizam's dominions, where a rebellious officer had assembled a force in defiance of His Highness's Government.

OR-

ORDERS by Brigadier-General Doveton, K. C. B. dated Camp, Pundah, March 24, 1819.

THE much lamented death of the gallant Lieutenant-Colonel Fraser, of His Majesty's Royal Scots, having precluded the Brigadier-General from receiving, before this morning, any official detailed account of the combined assault on the pettah of Asseer, on the morning of the 18th instant, and which has now been made by Lieutenant-Colonel Pollock, the second in command at the attack; the Brigadier-General avails himself with great pleasure of the contents of that report to express his high sense and approbation of the gallantry, promptitude and good order evinced by the whole of the Officers and troops employed on that occasion. Nothing was wanting but a more determined opposition on the part of the enemy.

Although the column of reserve under Major Dalrymple, of His Majesty's 30th regiment, and that under Major Walker, of the 2d light cavalry were not actively employed, yet from what the Brigadier-General himself observed of their good order and eager anxiety, he is perfectly convinced that had an opportunity presented itself, they would have been equally forward with their brethren in arms.

The Brigadier-General having expressed generally his sense of the good behaviour of the whole of the Officers and troops composing the column of attack, it only remains to notice distinctly the distinguished merits of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Fraser, of Major M'Leod, Deputy Quarter-Master-General, of Lieutenant-Colonel Pollock, second in command, of Captain Wetherall, commanding His Majesty's Royal Scots, Captain Powell, commanding the light company of His Majesty's 30th regiment, Major Owen, commanding the flank companies panies of His Majesty's 67th regiment, Captain Kelly, commanding flank companies of the Madras European regiment, Captain Conroy, commanding 1st battalion of 12th or W. light infantry, Lieut. Coventry, commanding sappers and miners, Captain Esdale commanding detachment 1st battalion 8th regiment Bengal native infantry, and Lieutenant Anthony of the Madras pioneers.

The Brigadier-General will feel high gratification in bringing the merits of the whole to the notice of superior authority.

ORDERS by Brigadier-General Doveton, K. C. B. dated Camp, Asseerghur, April 10, 1819.

THE fall of Asseer leaves to the Brigadier-General only the pleasing task of recording his sense of the merits and exertions of the Officers and troops and of bringing them to the notice of superior authority, where they can alone be fully and properly appreciated.

To the means placed at the Brigadier-General's disposal, by the rapid advance of the division under the personal command of Brigadier-General Sir John Malcolm, K. C. B. and K. L. S. as well as of the troops from the Nerbudda field force and from Saugur, under the personal command of Brigadier-General Watson, C. B. to the science and skill of the engineer and artillery branches, and finally to the distinguished gallantry and persevering exertions of the whole of the Officers and troops whom the Brigadier-General has the honour to command, are principally to be attributed the fall of so stupendous a fortress in eleven days from the opening of the trenches.

The distinguished and well known merits of Sir John Malcolm, might be considered as rendering any observation on the part of the Brigadier-Ge-

General superfluous, if not almost presumptuous, but he cannot refrain from paying the just tribute to public as well as private feeling, by expressing his warmest acknowledgements for the assistance which he has derived from his unwearied and persevering energy and activity during the entire period of military operations.

To Brigadier-General Watson, his best acknowledgements are also due for his able and useful co-operation since the period of his arrival.

The science displayed by Lieutenant Coventry, the superintending engineer, in selecting the only two points in which the fort was assailable, and in the choice of the positions for his enfilading, bombarding and breaching batteries, reflect the most distinguished credit on that Officer, and on Lieutenants Irvine and Purton, and Ensigns Lake and Warlow, by whom he was so ably seconded; while the skill and admirable practice displayed by the artillery, call upon the Brigadier-General in the most forcible manner to express his acknowledgements to Lieutenant Colonel Crosdill, C. B. commanding that corps, to Lieutenant Colonel Hitzler, Major Weldon, Captain Poignand, Captain Bonner, of the artillery, and generally to the whole of the Officers and men of the horse and foot artillery for their indefatigable conduct during the entire progress of the siege.

The unceasing fatigue and uncommon exertions of the corps of pioneers, so cheerfully and unremittingly displayed, entitle Captain M'Craith, commanding those of the coast, and Lieutenant Aitchison, of the Bengal establishment, to the Brigadier-General's warmest thanks.

He requests also, that Lieutenant Colonels M'Dowell, Dewar, Ewart, Greenstreet, and Pollock, commanding brigades of infantry, will be fully persuaded of the high estimation in which he holds the eminent services rendered by them, as well as by

by the Officers and men of their several brigades; and although the cavalry from the nature of the service, have principally been employed in duties of fatigue, yet the cheerfulness and alacrity displayed in the performance of these duties entitle Major Walker, the senior officer, and the other Officers and men of that branch to the Brigadier-General's best thanks.

To the whole of the general staff of the force the Brigadier-General feels himself under high obligation, but particularly to Major Macleod, the Deputy Quarter-Master General, and Captain Smith, the acting Assistant Adjutant-General, for their distinguished and indefatigable exertions.

To his personal staff and Persian Interpreter, Captain Morgan, the General is totally at a loss for words in which to offer him his acknowledgements for endless and unwearied activity, and must therefore leave his exertions to be better estimated by superior authority. To Captain Craeroft, his Aid-de-Camp, his thanks are likewise due for his attention and assistance.

To Captain Grant, commanding the regular troops of the Nawaub Sallabut Khan, who was present during the whole of the military operations with one of his battalions, and particularly attached to the Brigadier-General himself, he has also to acknowledge obligations of a superior nature, for the equally eminent display of the same qualifications noticed in Captain Morgan, and from which he has been the means of rendering the most distinguished services to the Brigadier-General himself, as well as to the public interest.

The General also requests that Captain Grant, D.A. Commissary-General, will accept his thanks for the able manner in which his exertions have been directed in the supply of the troops, and host of followers, so much so, that never for an hour has there been experienced a want of any

any article necessary either to their subsistence or comfort.

The operations of the division under the personal command of Brigader-General Sir John Malcolm, having been for the most part carried on in an opposite quarter, it is impossible that the Brigadier-General can himself speak to the merits of individuals, until such time as he shall have received a specific report from that Officer, and which, when received, will be published for general information: all he can at present say is his perfect knowledge that they have not been inferior to those of the Officers and troops more immediately under his own observations.

ORDERS by Brigadier-General Doveton, K. C. B.

Camp, Asseerghur, April 11, 1819.

Brigadier-General Doveton has high satisfaction in publishing the following extract of a report from Brigader-General Sir John Malcolm, K. C. B. and K. L. S. of the unremitting and successful operations of the Officers and troops of the Brigadier-General's division during the siege which he will have great pleasure in bringing to the notice of superior authority, and in the mean time he requests that every individual of that division will accept his best and grateful acknowledgments of their persevering intrepidity and exertion.

Extract.

" For his endeavours to ascertain, by careful examination, the best points of attack, and for the construction of all the different works and batteries, I consider myself greatly indebted to the science and personal efforts of Lieutenant Cheape, of the Bengal engineers, whose exertions have been unremitting in the performance of his duty.

"The conduct of the artillery from the hour they opened their fire till that on which it was stopped by the submission of the enemy, demands my unqualified praise The obstacles they had to overcome, and the fatigue they underwent, had no effect but to increase exertion.

"To Major Blair I am greatly indebted for the aid I received throughout the service, from his energy, experience, and judgment.

"My thanks are also most particularly due to Captain Frith, commanding the Madras artillery with the division, Captain Manson, of the Bombay artillery, and Lieutenant Black, commanding the horse artillery, and Commissary of Stores, and indeed to all the Officers and men of this corps, who vied with each other in supporting the high character of the branch to which they belong.

"I have much pleasure in noticing the conduct of Captain Fleetwood, of the rocket establishment, that Officer, when not required in his own line, volunteered to do duty in the batteries, where he is reported by Major Blair to have been most active and useful throughout the siege.

"How well the duties of the pioneers have been performed is evinced by the work they have done; in expressing my sense of this useful corps, I have to notice the exertions of Lieutenant Nash, commanding the party of Bengal, Lieutenant Wheeler of Madras, and Lieutenant Roe, of Bombay pioneers.

"I have the greatest reason to be satisfied with the manner in which the harassing duties allotted to the cavalry during the siege, have been performed; those of the infantry have been severe, but both European and Native Officers and soldiers have undergone continual fatigue with an animated zeal that lessened every difficulty they had to encounter.

"I have received from Lieutenant-Colonel Scot, C. B. that essential aid which a full knowledge of his his character led me to anticipate ; my best thanks are also due to Lieutenant-Colonel Corsellis, commanding the Bombay troops in my division, to Lieutenant-Colonel Russell, C B Lieutenant-Colonel Ewart, and Lieutenant-Colonel Smith, C.B. to the latter I am particularly indebted for his excellent arrangements when he commanded in the Pettah, previous to the occupation of the lower fort, and those he made upon entering the latter, as reported in my letter of the 30th ultimo ; I have also to express my thanks to Major Andrews, who commanded a brigade in my force before the arrival, and subsequent to the removal to your division of Lieutenant-Colonel Ewart ; I have generally to express my obligations to all the Officers who commanded corps and detachments in my force ; I was much pleased with the prompt and military manner in which Captain Edsall, commanding the 1st battalion 8th Bengal native infantry, led a detachment of his corps to the occupation of the 2d fort when it was evacuated by the enemy, who continued their efforts to annoy the entering corps from the upper works, but without effect, owing to the celerity of the movement and the judicious manner in which the troops were posted ; I consider it a most pleasing part of my duty to express on this occasion the great obligations I am under to the whole of the division and personal staff ; I am particularly indebted to Captain Napier, Assistant Adjutant-General and Lieutenant Gibbings, Assistant Quartermaster-General of the division, to the former for that clear arrangment of detail, that distinct communication of orders, and that attention to every point of the service which enables a Staff Officer to be useful, to the latter for an indefatigable exertion which led him personally to aid in the execution of every work in progress, and not only to apply, but to superintend the efforts of all in his department.

" I have also much satisfaction in expressing my approbation of the services of Lieutenant Mitchell, of the Quartermaster-General's department, and Captain Dangerfields, of the survey branch.

" The manner in which the force has been supplied, as well as that in which the means of his department, have been applied to the promotion of the service, reflects great credit on Captain Alves, Commissariat Officer of the division.

" To Captain Caulfield, of the Bengal cavalry, assistant to the Resident at Indore, I have on this as on former occasions, to express my gratitude for the aid he has given me.

" I have to state my sense of the zeal and activity of my Aid-de-Camp, Ensign G. Pasley, of His Majesty's 14th Foot, and Extra Aid-de-Camp Lieutenant J. Pasley, of His Majesty's 67th Foot, and of Lieutenant Lawrie, Paymaster of the division, and Lieutenant Bell, Postmaster, who have constantly acted as my personal staff.

" I cannot conclude this testimony to those under my command, without paying the tribute due to the great exertion of my Native Aid-de-Camp, Subadar Sied Hussain, of the body guard, of the Right Honourable the Governor of Fort St. George, which have been as unremitted as they have been useful throughout the whole course of the service."

April 12, 1819.

THE Brigadier-General has much pleasure in publishing the following letter, received from Brigadier-General Watson, C. B. and requests that the Officers mentioned in it will accept his best acknowledgements of their services, which he will not fail to bring to the notice of His Excellency the Most Noble the Commander in Chief.

Camp,

SIR, Camp, Asseerghur, April 11, 1819.

THE fall of Asseerghur to the troops under your command affording me the opportunity, I have great satisfaction in bringing to your notice the meritorious exertions of the whole of the Officers composing my general and personal staff during the operations of the siege, which entitles them to my warmest acknowledgements, and which are particularly due to Captain W James, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General; Captain Knawlles, Aide-de-Camp; and Lieutenant Strettell, Deputy Quarter-Master-General, for the valuable assistance I have received from them on the present, as well all former occasions.

I have, &c.

JAMES WATSON, commanding Bengal Division.

THE Brigadier-General has also much satisfaction in publishing the following letter received from Brigadier-General Sir John Malcolm, K. C. B. and K. L. S. subsequently to the report of the 11th instant.

SIR, Camp, Asseerghur, April 12, 1819.

IN the hurry of sending in my report, of yesterday's date, I omitted to mention Lieutenant-Colonel Comyn, of the 29th regiment Bengal native infantry, who commanded several posts on the south side of Asseerghur, and was directed by you to furnish, on my requisition, the assistance of his detachment; for this I was obliged very frequently to call, and the zeal and alacrity with which the Lieutenant-Colonel obeyed all my orders did not merit merit that I should have forgotten (as I did at the moment) to bring his exertions to your notice.

I have, &c.

JOHN MALCOLM, Brig. Gen.

Extract from a Report from Brigadier-General Pritzler, C. B. to the Adjutant-General, dated Camp, near Copauldroog, 14th May 1819, inclosed in a Letter from the Adjutant-General, dated 22d May 1819.

I DO myself the honour to acquaint you, for the information of the Commander in Chief, that I arrived before Copauldroog on the 8th instant.

On the morning of the 10th a breaching battery of two eighteen-pounders was opened upon the wall of the lower fort, and in the evening two more eighteen-pounders were got into it. On the evening of the 12th the breach appeared nearly practicable, when the troops in the lower fort called out for quarter, which was given to them, and the gate taken possession of.

The Killedar, who retired in the upper fort with the best of his troops, opened a negotiation with the Nizam's principal Officer, but which was broken off on the morning of the 13th; and perceiving that nothing but a very strong and decided measure would prevent a long and protracted siege, I determined to carry as many of the lower works by escalade as could be accomplished; for which purpose the troops specified in the margin* were placed in the batteries and at twelve o'clock they moved out under the fire of all our guns and mortars, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Fraser, 12th native infantry, in two divisions, the first or left attack commanded by Captain Tew, His Majesty's 34th regiment, and the second or right

* Left attack.—One company and half, flank battalion, one ditto rifle corps, one ditto 4th native infantry, and two ditto 12th native infantry.

Right attack.—One company and half flank, battalion, one ditto rifle corps, one ditto 4th native infantry, and two ditto 12th native infantry.

at-

attack under that of Captain Cuppaidge, His Majesty 53d regiment. These columns were conducted, the first by Lieutenant Grant, and the second by Ensign Oliphant, of the engineers; and Captain Smithwaite commanded the pioneers, who carried the ladders

The left attack moved on without much opposition till they arrived at the first gate, which was however blown open by a galloper gun of His Majesty's 22d light dragoons, under the command of Lieutenant Gregory, to whom much praise is due for having carried it through a heavy fire, and up a road apparently impassable for any wheel carriage

The right attack found the wall they were to escalade very high, which rendered the operation slow and tedious; I therefore directed Captain Jones, His Majesty's 69th regiment, with the detachment as per margin*, to follow up the left attack, and the whole of the three parties formed a junction at the second gateway, from which they pushed the enemy, who disputed every inch of ground, to the very summit of the hill, where they begged for quarter.

Such a service could not be performed without some loss, and when I reflect upon the strength of the enemy's works, and the power they had of throwing down stones, I am astonished that it was so trifling, being only six killed and fifty-one wounded, and which can only be accounted for by the very spirited manner in which the Officers and men did their duty; but I have to lament the loss of a very promising young Officer, Ensign Elliot, of the rifle corps, who fell when exerting himself to the utmost near the second gateway.

I have also to lament the loss of the services of Captain Dun, my Assistant-Quarter-Master-General, ral, and Lieutenant Pringle Taylor, 22d dragoons, severely wounded, the former employed to explain my orders to one of the attacks, and the latter who happened accidently to be on the spot, having been permitted to advance with it. Both these Officers, as well as Lieutenant Silver, of His Majesty 53d regiment, were wounded, when shewing an example of the most determined bravery to the troops.

* One company flank battalion; one company rifle corps; one company 4th native infantry.

A squadron of His Majesty's 22d dragoons, under the command of Captain Mills, was so placed as to cut off the enemy's retreat in the event of their attempting one, but the attacks were too spirited to give them time to think of it before they were driven up the hill.

Where every Officer and soldier employed did his duty to the utmost, it is difficult to point out those who most distinguished themselves, but I feel much indebted to Lieutenant Grant of the engineers, for the very judicious situation in which he placed the batteries, planned the attacks, and conducted one of them, and he was ably assisted by Ensign Oliphant.

To Major Cleaveland, of the artillery, much praise is due for the judgment which he shewed in so well directing the fire from the batteries, and the Officers and men of that corps, as well as the artillery troop of His Majesty's 22d dragoons, are entitled to every credit, for the admirable manner in which the guns were served, both before and during the attack, and the excellent practice which was made.

Nothing could exceed the zeal shewn to the service by Lieutenant-Colonel Fraser, Captains Tew, Cuppaidge, and Jones, commanding the different parties, and every thing that could be done by men were accomplished by the troops under their command.

To Captain Smithwaite and the pioneers I feel much indebted for their unwearied exertions, constantly stantly exposed to a very heavy fire, and much praise is due to Staff-Surgeon Trotter and the medical Officers generally, whose assistance was upon every occasion and in every situation so perfectly afforded.

To the Assistant-Adjutant-General Lieutenant Watson, and Assistant-Quarter-Master-General Captain Donoghue, I feel much indebted for their great exertions and the able assistance they afforded me, as well as to Captain Dun, Assistant-Quarter-Master-General, and to my Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant Browne, of His Majesty's 25th light dragoons.

I enclose Lieutenant-Colonel Fraser's report to me.

Extract from Lieutenant-Colonel Fraser's Report.

After a good deal of firing the Killedar's people hoisted a white flag, and demanded terms, and the Killedar after much hesitation came out and delivered himself up, on my assuring him at the gateway, he being on the top of the wall, that his life should be spared; and his whole garrison surrendered on the same terms.

I cannot close my report without stating that the conduct of Captain Tew, of the 34th regiment; Captain Cuppaidge, 53d regiment; and Captain Jones, of the 69th regiment, merits the greatest praise, they having acted with the greatest gallantry.

The like praise is due to Captain Greene, commanding a detachment of the 12th native infantry; to Captain Tabois, Deputy Post-Master, who volunteered to act with his company in the same corps; to Captain Hall, commanding a detachment of the 4th native infantry; and to Lieutenant Crokat, commanding a detachment of the rifle corps. The gallant and zealous exertions of Lieutenant Grant and Lieutenant Oliphant, of the engineers, were most conspicuous, both in advance and wherever their presence was required. The same remark will apply to Captain Smithwaite, of the pioneers; Captain Jenour, Brigade-Major; and Captain Dun, of the Quarter-Master-General's-Department.

Mr. Assistant Surgeon Harwood, who accompanied us up the fort, and Mr. Assistant-Surgeon Hughes, who was stationed below, afforded the most prompt assistance to the wounded.

I inclose a return of the killed and wounded.

Honourable Sir,

I HAVE very great satisfaction in being enabled to lay before you the accompanying dispatch from Major-General Sir William Grant Keir, K. M. T. conceiving that you will agree with me in the opinion, that the service entrusted to him has been executed in a stile most creditable to the professional skill of the Major-General himself, to the science of the staff, and engineer and artillery departments, and to the steady gallantry and meritorious endurance of fatigue and privation of the Officers and troops of His Majesty's and of the Honourable Company's service, belonging to the army of this Presidency, of which the force of the expedition consisted.

I anticipate also the satisfaction you will receive, in reading of the very cordial and efficient aid afforded by Captain Collier, of the royal navy and the Officers and crews of the squadron under his command, and to which Captain Hall, of the Honourable Company's marine, and the Officers and seamen, under his orders, as well as numerous volunteers from the transports, of such troops of His Highness the Imaum of Muscat as had arrived, cheerfully contributed.

I cannot conclude without congratulating your Honourable Board, on results to which, as Sir William Grant Keir himself has pointed out, the very liberal and judiciously selected means put at his disposal by your government, have so mainly contributed.

I have the honour to be &c.

SIR,

I HAVE the satisfaction to report that the town of Rasulkheima, after a resistance of six days, was taken possession of this morning by the force under my command. Previous to making you acquainted with the circumstances which led to this fortunate result, I shall do myself the honour briefly to detail the events which occurred between the period of my last communication and the commencement of the operations before Rasulkheima.

On the 18th ultimo, after completing my arrangements at Muscat, the Liverpool sailed for the rendezvous at Kishmee On the 21st we fell in with the fleet off the Persian coast, and anchored off the Island of Larrack, on the 24th November.

As it appeared probable that a considerable period would elapse before the junction of the ships which were detained at Bombay, I conceived it would prove highly advantageous to avail myself of that interval, in acquiring as accurate a knowledge of the strength and defences of Rasulkheima as personal observation could supply, and I gladly embraced the proposal of Captain Collier, that the Liverpool should proceed thither for that purpose. The senior engineer was accordingly taken on board, and having sailed from Larrack on the morning of the 25th we anchored off Rasulkheima the same evening.

From this date till the 27th the place was closely and repeatedly reconnoitered, and the weather continuing favourable for our operations, I determined to order down the troops and commence the the attack without waiting for the rear transports, as the season of the north west winds was rapidly approaching, and Captain Collier appeared apprehensive that a further delay might prove detrimental to the enterprize A vessel was therefore dispatched with instructions to Captain Walpole, who was left in charge of the fleet, and on the 2d instant the transports arrived under convoy of the Curlew No time was lost in making the necessary preparations for landing, which was effected the following morning without opposition, at a spot which had been previously selected for that purpose about two miles to the southward of the town. The troops were formed across the Isthmus connecting the Peninsula on which the town is situated with the neighbouring country, and the whole of the day was occupied in getting tents on shore to shelter the men from the rain, landing engineer's tools, sand bags, &c. and making arrangements preparatory to commencing our approaches the next day.

On the morning of the 4th the light troops were ordered in advance, supported by the pickets, to dislodge the enemy from a bank within 900 yards of the outer fort, which was expected to afford good cover for the men, and to serve as a depôt for stores previous to the erection of the batteries. The whole of the light companies of the force under the command of Captain Backhouse, of His Majesty's 47th regiment accordingly moved forward and drove the Arabs with great gallantry from a date grove, and over the bank above described, close under the walls of the fort, followed by the pickets under Major Molesworth, who took post at the sand-bank whilst the European light troops were skirmishing in front. The enemy kept up a sharp fire of musketry and cannon during these movements, and I regret to add, that Major Molesworth, a gallant and zealous Officer, was killed by a cana cannon-shot at the head of the pickets. Lieutenant Stepney of the 65th was wounded on this occasion. The troops however maintained their position during the day, and in the night effected a lodgment within 300 yards of the southernwest tower, and erected a battery for four guns, together with a mortar battery on the right, and a trench of communication for the protection of the covering party.

The weather having become rather unfavourable for the disembarkation of the stores required for the siege, it was with considerable difficulty that this primary object was effected; but every obstacle was surmounted by the zeal and indefatigable exertions of the navy, and on the morning of the 6th we were enabled to open three eighteen-pounders on the fort; a couple of howitzers and six-pounders were also placed in the battery on the right, which played on the defences of the towers, and nearly silenced the enemy's fire. The Liverpool, during these operations, warped in as close to the shore as her draught of water would allow, and opened her guns on the town, which must have created considerable alarm in the garrison, but she was unfortunately at too great a distance to produce any decided effect.

The enemy, who during the whole of our progress exhibited a considerable degree of resolution in withstanding our ingenuity and in counteracting our attacks, sallied forth at eight o'clock this evening along the whole front of our intrenchments, crept close up to the mortar battery without being perceived, and entered it over the parapet, after spearing the advanced sentries. The party which occupied it was obliged to retire, but being immediately reinforced, charged the assailants, who were driven out of the battery with considerable loss. The attack on the left was repelled instantaneously by the spirited resistance of the covering party under Major Warren, who distinguished himself much on this occasion by his coolness and gallantry. The enemy repeated his attacks towards morning, but was vigorously repulsed.

During the 7th every exertion was made to land and bring up the remaining guns and mortars, which was accomplished during the night, after incessant labour by the sailors, assisted by working parties from the troops and those of His Highness the Imaun, who cheerfully volunteered their services. These were immediately placed in battery, together with two twenty-four pounders which were landed from the Liverpool; and in the morning the whole of our ordnance opened on the fort, and fired, with scarcely any intermission, till sunset, when the breach in the curtain was reported nearly practicable and the towers almost untenable. Immediate arrangements were made for the assault, and the troops ordered to move down to the trenches at day break the next morning. The bombardment continued during the night, and the batteries having recommenced their fire before day light, the breaches were completed by eight o'clock. The accompanying orders will explain to His Excellency the dispositions of attack, as well as the measures taken to guard against a possibility of failure, in the event of the enemy defending himself as desperately as might have been expected from his previous defence. These precautions were however unnecessary; the party moved forward about eight o'clock and entered the fort through the breaches, without firing a shot, and it soon appeared that the enemy had evacuated the place.

The town was taken possession of and found almost entirely deserted, only eighteen or twenty men and a few women remaining in their houses.

Upon the whole it appears evident, considering the spirited behaviour of the enemy at the commencemencement of the siege, that their sudden resolution to evacuate the place was occasioned by the overwhelming fire of the artillery, of which they could have formed no previous idea, and which the ample means placed at my disposal enabled me to bring against the town.

Our loss, I am happy to say, has been much less than could have been expected from the length of the siege, and the obstinacy with which the enemy disputed our approaches. I have had no means of ascertaining theirs, but it must have been severe.

I beg you will assure His Excellency that I feel entirely satisfied with the conduct of the troops; their gallantry has been exceeded only by their patience and cheerfulness under every species of privation and fatigue, and the peculiarity of this service has called forth a full display of these qualities, which are as creditable to the soldier as the most intrepid acts of bravery. By the Orders*, which I do myself the honour to inclose, His Excellency will be enabled to estimate the services performed by Captain Collier and the naval part of the expedition, and I can only add that the acknowledgements therein expressed are scarcely adequate to the assistance I have received from them.

I have, &c.

W. GRANT KEIR, Major-General.

GENERAL ORDER by the Honourable the Governor in Council.

Bombay Castle, December 28, 1819.

resistance of six days, when the town was evacuated by the enemy.

In publishing the General Orders issued by the Major-General on that occasion, the Honourable the Governor in Council has to express his unqualified concurrence in the testimony borne by that distinguished Officer, to the science of the staff, and engineer and artillery departments, and to the steady gallantry evinced, and the fatigue and privation so meritoriously endured by all the Officers and troops of His Majesty's and of the Honourable Company's service, of which the force was composed.

The Governor in Council entertains the fullest sense of the very cordial and efficient aid afforded by Captain Collier, C. B. commanding the naval branch of the armament, and by Captains Lock and Walpole, of the royal navy, and of the Officers and crews of the squadron that co-operated on the expedition; whose exertions contributed most materially to the speedy reduction of Rasulkheima, and it will afford the Government the highest gratification to communicate these sentimente to His Excellency the Naval Commander in Chief in India, and to the Authorities at home.

The conduct of Captain Hall, and of Lieutenants Maillard, Arthur, Faithful, Greenway, and Watson, in command of cruizers, and of Lieutenants Seawright and Bruck, and the Officers and men of the Honourable Company's marine employed on this service, have been spoken of in terms of high commendation by the Major-General, and also by Captain Collier, whose established reputation and experience of the qualifications that distinguish the naval profession, renders his testimony to the character of the Bombay marine of peculiar value in the estimation of the Governor in Council.

In promulgating the merited eulogium afforded by Major-General Sir William Grant Keir, to his gal-gallant associates, the Governor in Council has to add his unfeigned acknowledgements to the Major-General himself, for the energy and ability which have characterized the conduct of this important service, where the same professional judgment and gallantry and the same skill in conciliating the entire confidence and support of those placed under his command, have been displayed, the manifestation of which has so repeatedly drawn forth the admiration of the late Government, and which must on all occasions ensure success.

By order of the Honourable the Governor in Council,

FRANCIS WARDEN, Chief Secretary.

Copy of a letter from Mr. Warden, Secretary to the Government of Bombay, to the Secretary to the East India Company, dated 31st January 1820.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you, for the information of the Honourable the Court of Directors, the copy of a dispatch from Major-General Sir William Grant Keir, K. M. T. to the address of the Adjutant-General of the army, reporting the fall of the piratical fortress of Zyah.

I have, &c.

J. WARDEN, Chief Secretary.

Copy

Copy of a Report from Major-General Sir William Grant Keir, K. M. T. to the Adjutant-General, dated Camp, Rasulkheima, January 3, 1820.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to report, for the information of His Excellency the Commander in Chief, that a few days after I had last the honour of addressing you, it was reported to me that the town of Rumps (one of the piratical ports described in my instructions, about eight miles northward of Rasulkheima), had been abandoned by its inhabitants, who were supposed to have taken refuge in the hill-fort of Zyah, which is situated at the head of a navigable creek near two miles from the sea coast. This place was the residence of Hussein Bin Aly, a Sheikh of considerable importance among the Joasmee tribes, and a person who, from his talents and lawless habits, as well as from the strength and advantageous situation of his fort, was likely to attempt the revival of the piratical system at the first favourable opportunity. It became a desirable object, therefore, to extinguish at once the only remaining hopes of the ill-disposed part of the neighbouring population, by reducing the power of this Chieftain, whose influence was hourly increasing, and a detachment was accordingly formed for this purpose, under the command of Major Warren, of His Majesty's 65th regiment.

This detachment was composed of thirty artillery-men, His Majesty's 65th regiment, and the flank companies of the 1st battalion 2d regiment, with two brass twelve-pounders, two mortars, and four field-pieces, which were considered fully adequate to the performance of the service. His Majesty's ships Liverpool and Curlew moved down the Rumps to expedite the landing of the stores, and render render any further assistance that might be required; and this arrangement enabled me to proceed thither to superintend the progress of the operations. It was soon discovered that the fortifications were more formidable than had been represented, and I found it necessary to order a reinforcement of four flank companies to complete the close investment of the place. Some heavy guns were also found indispensable; and to save the time and labour which it would require to bring them from camp, Captain Collier, with his usual readiness to promote the public service, offered two of the Liverpool's twenty-four pounders, which were immediately landed and placed in battery against the fort.

I beg leave to refer to the inclosed copy of Major Warren's report for a detailed account of his proceedings, which were conducted in a manner highly creditable to his professional talents, and with a zeal and spirit which I have seldom seen equalled: This is not the only instance in which I have experienced the benefit of Major Warren's services, and I beg leave to recommend him to His Excellency as an intelligent and valuable Officer. The troops behaved with their accustomed gallantry, and are entitled to great credit for their steadiness and good conduct; and I have again the gratification of expressing my acknowledgements to Captain Collier and the naval part of the expedition, whose exertions, particularly those of Captain Walpole and Lieutenant Campbell, have been beyond all praise. I have the honour to forward a copy of my Orders, together with a list of casualties, and plan of attack, the latter of which will serve to elucidate the detailed report of the operations. This detachment returned to camp on the 26th ultimo, after destroying the fortifications; and the prisoners were brought to Rasulkheima, where they now remain in confinement.

I have been detained at this place in concerting various arrangements with the neighbouring Chieftains, which I am happy to say are nearly brought to a favourable conclusion; and have taken advantage of this interval to place the town in a state of security against any sudden attack. It has been found necessary to reduce the extent of the works, in proportion to the small number of men who are to be left for their defence, and this afforded full employment to the engineers and constant working parties from the troops. The outer fort, although rendered perfectly untenable by our batteries during the siege, still presented, from its vicinity to the town, most advantageous cover to an attacking enemy; I have therefore directed the towers to be destroyed, and the curtains levelled, which has been partly executed, and will be completed in the course of two or three days, by which period I trust that the works now constructing will be sufficiently advanced to enable me to proceed for the performance of the remaining part of my instructions.

When I had last the honour of addressing you, my information did not enable me to report with any certainty on the loss sustained by the enemy, but I have since ascertained, from various sources, that it amounted to little less than 1000, and the Sheikh himself has acknowledged that 400 fighting men of his own tribe were either killed or wounded, which would appear to establish a much higher proportion, but the most authentic accounts agree in fixing it nearly at the number I have stated. I am happy to say that the people are returning daily to their habitations in the Date Groves, and a communication opening which must prove highly advantageous to the garrison. Captain Thompson, my Interpreter, has exerted himself most successfully in acquiring the confidence of the inhabitants, and I trust that in a short time an intercourse will be established which will be productive of the most beneficial effects.

I have the honour to be, &c.

W. GRANT KEIR, Maj. Gen.

Copy of a Report from Major Warren to Major-General Sir William Grant Keir, dated Camp, Zyah, Gulf of Persia, December 23, 1819.

SIR,

AGREEABLY to your desire, I have the honour to detail the operations of the detachment under my command, which led to the surrender of the hill, fort, and town of Zyah yesterday, at noon.

On the 18th instant, I embarked at Rasulkheima at day-break, in the boats of the fleet, with His Majesty's 65th regiment under my command, and at noon formed a junction with the flank companies of the 1st battalion 2d regiment native infantry, under Captain Cocke, within four miles of our destination. This operation however was attended with considerable difficulty and risk, owing to the heavy surf that beat on the shore, and which was the occasion of some loss in ammunition, and of a few boats being upset and stove in.

At half-past three P. M. having refreshed my men, we commenced our march, and fording the creek or back water, took up our position to the north eastward of the fort, the enemy firing at us as we passed, notwithstanding that our messenger, whom we had previously sent in to summons the Sheikh, was still in the place, and I lost no time in pushing our rifle men and piquets as forward as I could, without exposing them too much to the firing of the enemy, whom I found strongly posted under secure cover in the Date Tree Groves in front of the the town. Captain Cocke, with the light company of his battalion, was at the same time sent to the westward to cut off the retreat of the enemy on that side.

At day-break next morning finding it necessary to drive the enemy still further in, to get a nearer view of his defences, I moved forward the rifle company of His Majesty's 65th regiment, and after a considerable opposition from the enemy, who you are well aware are peculiarly adapted for this species of warfare, I succeeded, with a few casualties, in forcing him to retire some distance, but not without disputing every foot of the ground, which was singularly calculated for resistance, being intersected at every few yards by banks and water courses raised for the purposes of irrigation, and covered with date trees.

In the course of the day our messenger returned with an evasive answer from the Sheikh, and a couple of eight inch mortars were landed with great labour and fatigue, one of which commenced playing the same evening on the hill fort, and the other the next morning.

On the morning of the 20th, the position occupied by the enemy being still in advance of the town, I moved forward the rifle men again, who, in their usual spirited style, quickly forced the enemy to yield up his cover, and would soon have driven him to the walls of his town, had they not been reluctantly compelled by my orders to occupy the places the Arabs had quitted, until by an increase to my numbers I should have it in my power to more completely incircle the whole of the town.

Means were afforded me to carry this purpose into effect, by the arrival in the course of the day of the detachment under the command of Captain Backhouse, His Majesty's 47th regiment, composed of the flank companies of that corps, and of the 1st battalion 3d regiment native infantry, which you were pleased to send for, on your knowledge of the great labour and fatigue borne by my small detachment, in getting the guns and stores from the distant landing place. and which necessarily caused the greatest number of my men to be almost constantly detached and employed on fatiguing duties.

The next morning the rifle men, supported by the pickets, were again called into play, and soon established their position within three or four hundred yards of the town, which, with the base of the hill, was so completely surrounded as to render the escape of any of the garrison now almost impossible. This advantage, however, was not gained without a severe loss; the rifle company and the regiment at large having been deprived, by the death of Ensign Mathieson, of the services of a most gallant, intelligent, and zealous Officer.

Two twenty-four pounders and the two twelves, the landing of which had been retarded by the difficulty of communication with the fleet from which we derived all our supplies, having been now brought on shore, we broke ground in the evening, and, notwithstanding the unfavourableness of the soil from its rocky nature, had them ready to play the next morning at day-break; the former to batter in breach the hill fort on the north east side, and the latter to destroy the defences of the Sheikh's house on the westward.

Aware, however, that the families of the enemy were all still in the town, and humanity dictating that some effort should be made to save the innocent from the fate that awaited the guilty, an opportunity was afforded for that purpose, by an offer to the garrison of security to their women and children, should they be sent out within the hour; but the infatuated Chief, either from an idea that his fort on the hill was not to be reached by our shot, or with the vain hope to gain time by procrastination, returning no answer to our communication, nication, while he detained our messenger, we opened our fire at half past eight in the morning, and such was the precision of the practice, that by half past ten, perceiving that the breach would be soon practicable, I was in the act of issuing the necessary orders for the assault, when a white flag was displayed, and the enemy, after some little delay in assembling from the different quarters of the place, marched out without their arms, with Hussein Bin Aloy at their head, to the number of three hundred and ninety-eight; and at half past one P. M. the British flags were hoisted on the hill fort and at the Sheikh's house. The women and children, to the number of four hundred, were at the same time collected together in a place of security, and, I am happy to add, without a single instance of either insult or injury to their persons or feelings having occurred. The prisoners have since been sent on board the fleet, and I am now dismantling the fort and the Sheikh's house.

The service has been short, but arduous. The enemy defended themselves with an obstinacy and ability worthy of a better cause.

The exertions of every person in this detachment passed under your view and that of Captain Collier, during your occasional visits to the scene of operations; you are therefore fully able to appreciate the zeal by which Captain Walpole, of His Majesty's brig Curlew, who commanded the sailors on shore, must have been actuated, and the ability with which that zeal must have been applied to have enabled him to overcome the difficulties attending the landing of the supplies and stores, particularly the guns, which after being brought up a narrow, intricate, and shallow creek, a distance of upwards of three miles, had to be dragged through a muddy swamp, and afterwards over a considerable space of rocky and intersected ground, before they could be placed in the batteries; in this service vice he was much assisted by Lieutenant Campbell, of His Majesty's ship Liverpool, whose ingenuity in finding out new expedients to overcome each difficulty as it presented itself never failed him, and the precision with which he laid the guns in the twenty-four pounder battery, where he commanded under the superintendance of Captain Walpole, could not be surpassed.

To the rifle company of His Majesty's 65th regiment, commanded by Lieutenant Hunt, I am most particularly indebted; constantly employed in the most perilous service, exposed not only to the fire of the Arabs below in the date groves, but also to that of the enemy above, occupying the little towers and breast works, with which the whole face of the hill was studded to the very top, they never ceased to evince the utmost spirit, steadiness, and alacrity, and only required to be restrained to prevent their going too far. To Captain Digby, commanding His Majesty's 65th regiment, and to Captain Cocke, commanding the detachment on the west side of the fort, I am also much indebted for their unwearied attention to their several duties, as likewise to Captain Backhouse, of His Majesty's 47th regiment, commanding the reinforcement, and to Lieutenant Morley, commanding the artillery.

The judicious positions chosen by Lieutenant Price, of the engineers, for the erection of the batteries, fully bespeak the merits of that Officer. To Major Colebrooke, the Deputy Quartermaster-General, and Captain Wilson, your Military Secretary, whom you were kind enough to permit to accompany me throughout this service, I am under the most particular obligations for their advice and assistance on every occasion; and to Lieutenant Marriot, your Aide-de-Camp, I am greatly indebted, not only for his services during the late operations but before at Rasul Kheima during the attack on our trenches there; without the assistance of these Officers I should have found it most difficult to keep up my communications with the detachment on the west side of the town, and along the extended chain we were obliged to take up round the base of the hill to prevent the escape of the enemy. From the intelligence and zeal of Captain Thompson, the Interpreter, I have also derived great benefit; to Lieutenants Place and Warren, the former Acting Quartermaster, and the latter Acting Adjutant, to the detachment, I have likewise had occasion to express my obligation for their attention and alacrity in the performance of their duties; nor can I close this report without feeling that it is due to Lieutenant Brucks, the agent of transports, to bring to your notice his laborious exertions in the particular line of his duties during the embarkation and subsequent landing of the troops on the 18th instant, on which occasion the Officers and men belonging to the cruizers and transports had all to endure a day of most severe labour and privation; in short few services of so limited a duration have afforded more opportunities to the troops to exhibit qualities of greater capability of fatigue and endurance of privations than the present, owing to the great distance of the fleet from the camp, which prevented the tents from being landed until the operations were nearly over, and rendered the receipt of the supplies difficult and precarious, but all were borne by the Officers and men with exemplary cheerfulness; in conclusion I beg leave to inclose a return of killed and wounded, and I have the honour to be, &c.

N. WARREN, Major,
Commanding His Majesty's 65th Regiment and Field Detachment.

FIELD

FIELD ORDERS by Major-General Sir W. G. Keir, K. M. T.

Camp, Rasul Kheima, December 25, 1819.

THE Major-General has just received a report from Major Warren of the progress and result of the attack on the fort of Zyah, and hastens to discharge a most gratifying task in recording the gallantry and good conduct of the troops employed in its reduction.

The service was performed under the eye of the Major-General, who is therefore enabled, from his own observation, duly to appreciate the persevering efforts which led to the fall of the place.

To Major Warren he feels particularly grateful. The operations were conducted by that Officer with his usual judgment and decision, and the Major-General will not fail to bring his conspicuous merit to the notice of His Excellency the Commander in Chief.

The Major-General fully concurs in the praises bestowed by Major Warren on the Officers and men who served under him on this occasion, and has sincere pleasure in noticing the spirited behaviour of the rifle company of His Majesty's 65th regiment, under Lieutenant Hunt, which has distinguished itself so eminently throughout the whole of the service. To Captains Digby, Backhouse, and Cocke, Major Warren has professed himself much indebted, and the judgment and ability of Lieutenant Price, of the engineers, and Morley, of the artillery, have been favourably mentioned by him, and the Major-General is happy to express his approbation of their exertions; Major Colebrooke, Captains Thompson and Wilson, and Lieutenant Marriot, of the Major-General's Staff, have acquitted themselves entirely to the satisfaction of Major Major Warren, and are requested to accept the thanks of the Major-General for the zealous and valuable assistance rendered by them during the operations. Lieutenants Place and Warren, Acting Staff to the detachment, appear also to have exerted themselves most creditably in the performance of their respective duties.

The Major-General feels at a loss to express, in adequate terms, his obligations to the navy, but the value of their services will be estimated when he declares, that the enterprise must have failed without their assistance. Captain Collier's zealous, cheerful, and active co-operation was never more conspicuous than on this occasion, and he begs him to accept his warmest thanks for the cordiality and promptitude with which every arrangement was conducted. The astonishing efforts made by the sailors, under Captain Walpole and Lieutenant Campbell, in dragging the twenty four pounders through a deep mud, and landing and bringing forward the requisite stores, have never been surpassed during the whole course of the Major-General's experience; whilst the precision with which the breaching battery was directed by Lieutenant Campbell, under the superintendence of Captain Walpole, would have reflected credit on the most experienced corps of artillery, and accordingly produced the most rapid and decided effects. The Major-General offers to both Officers and men his warmest tribute of admiration, and begs them to accept of his sincere thanks for their important and spirited services.

Return of the Killed and Wounded of a Detachment under the Command of Major Warren, His Majesty's 65th Regiment, during the Operations before the Fort of Zyah, from the 18th to the 22d December 1819, both Days inclusive.

Flank Companies His Majesty's 47th Regiment—1 private killed; 2 privates wounded.
His Majesty's 65th Regiment—1 officer, 2 privates, killed; 1 corporal, 12 privates, wounded.
Pioneers—1 private wounded.
Total—1 officer, 3 privates, killed; 1 corporal, 15 privates, wounded.

The Honourable Charles Harward Butler, in the room of the Honourable James Wandesford Butler, now Earl of Ormonde and Ossory.

FROM THE

LONDON GAZETTE of SEPTEMBER 30, 1820.

THE following Addresses have been presented to His Majesty, on board the Royal George Yacht at Spithead, by Deputations from each of the respective places:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, Inhabitants of the Town of Portsmouth, beg beg leave on this your Majesty's first visit off this Port, since your Majesty's accession to the Throne of this Kingdom, to approach your Royal Person, and to offer to your Majesty the renewed assurances of our inviolable attachment to your Majesty's Person and Government. We at the same time presume to express our humble but earnest prayer, that your Majesty may long continue to reign in the hearts of a loyal and affectionate people, and in the enjoyment of uninterrupted health, and every earthly blessing.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"Gentlemen,

"I have great pleasure in receiving this constitutional and affectionate Address from the loyal Inhabitants of the ancient and renowned Sea Port Town of Portsmouth.

"Nothing can be more acceptable to my feelings than the expression of the inviolable sentiments of a loyal people, faithfully attached to the Crown and Constitution of the Realm, and sensible of the blessings which they enjoy under them.

"I cannot visit this great naval station without contemplating with just pride the numerous expeditions which have proceeded from its shore, whereof the brilliant atchievements have shed such lasting glory on the navy of the United Kingdom, and so eminently contributed to the security of its vast empire.

"It will ever be a source of sincere gratification to me to known that the town, so usefully connected with this great warlike station, is additionally blessed with prosperity and happiness in its peaceful relations."

After the presentation of this Address, His Majesty was graciously pleased to confer the honour of Knighthood on Mr., now Sir George Garratt.

To His Most Excellent Majesty George the Fourth, KING of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. &c. &c.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the Inhabitants of Ryde and its Vicinity, and the Visitors to that watering place, collected from various parts of your Majesty's Dominions, avail ourselves of the occasion of your Majesty's visit to the Isle of Wight, to offer to your Majesty our warmest sentiments of loyalty and affection to your Majesty's Person, of devotion to the illustrious House of Brunswick, and of attachment to the blessings of the British Constitution.

Your Majesty's naval excursions, while they prove a stimulus to various species of nautical and other industry, and encourage a spirit of emulation amongst all classes of the community to become familiar with the element on which Britain boasts her surest defence in her gallant navy, will we ardently hope be attended with the most beneficial effects to your Majesty's health, that the welfare of these kingdoms may continue to be promoted by your Majesty, and that we may long look up to your Majesty as the patron of all that is for the good of these realms.

At a period when disaffection and sedition lose no opportunity of raising their hydra heads, every loyal subject is imperatively called upon to evince his regard for the King and the Constitution, by upholding those establishments that have so long made Great Britain pre-eminent among all nations for wisdom, glory, commerce, and prosperity.

Animated by these considerations we beg, with the greatest humility and with the most heartfelt desire, that they may be favourably accepted, to offer offer to your Majesty our united sentiments of loyalty and attachment, and assurances of our continued prayers for the health, felicity, and prosperous reign of your Majesty.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

" Gentlemen,

" It is with the utmost satisfaction that I receive from the Inhabitants of Ryde, and the Visitors thereof, this dutiful and affectionate Address.

" I fully appreciate the loyal spirit which has called forth this declaration of their warm and affectionate feelings towards my Person and to the House of Brunswick; and I honour those sentiments which breathe so ardent and so devoted an attachment to our excellent Constitution.

" I rely with full confidence on the good sense of the people, knowing that at all times, and in all cases, evil-designing individuals may by artifices create partial and temporary delusions, but that the sterling sense and innate loyalty of the great body of the nation are ever guided by the all-ruling dictates of sound reason, and the influence of truth.

" I have derived great pleasure from witnessing and admiring that superior system of our naval service, which has maintained with so much glory the maritime pre-eminence of the empire in war, and so essentially contributed to its commercial prosperity in peace.

" I thank the good people of Ryde and its vicinity, for their cordial prayers for the conservation of that health which, under the blessing of Divine Providence, I hope to preserve for the benefit of my people, and the maintenance of the Constitution of the empire."

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble and dutiful Address of the Inhabitants of the Town and Parish of Portsea, in the County of Southampton.

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, Inhabitants of the Town and Parish of Portsea, beg leave to express the great pleasure which your Majesty's safe arrival in our neighbourhood has given us, to congratulate your Majesty thereon, and at the same time to offer the humble but sincere reassurance of our deep and unalterable attachment to your Majesty's Person.

We are anxiously solicitous for the continuance of your Majesty's health, and we venture to hope that your Majesty's visits to our Coast, so flattering and gratifying to ourselves, will prove agreeable and beneficial to your Majesty.

Again we ask permission to lay at your Majesty's feet the declaration of our unshaken and ardent loyalty; and we pray God that your Majesty's reign over us may be long, happy, and in every thing accompanied by the Divine Blessing.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

" Gentlemen,

" I have great pleasure in receiving from the Inhabitants of the Town and Parish of Portsea, this Address of congratulation upon my visit to their maritime part of my dominions.

" It is ever a gratification to me to receive from my loyal subjects the assurance of their personal and constitutional attachment to me, it affords acceptable proofs of their inheriting the genuine feelings of their ancestors, emanating from principles, ciples, but calculated to maintain the honour and dignity of the Crown, the security of the State, and the prosperity of the Empire."

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Inhabitants of the ancient Town and Borough of Gosport, most respectfully request permission to approach your Majesty and to declare the sincere pleasure we experience in having the present opportunity of expressing our high gratification that your Majesty's health is re-established, and that we may in a certain measure ascribe it to those visits with which this part of your Majesty's maritime dominions has been honoured by your Majesty.

For the long continuance of that health we most anxiously pray, and with no ordinary feeling beg to assure your Majesty of our steady attachment to your Royal Person and Government, and the truly unfeigned interest we venture to assume in whatever is connected with your Majesty's health and happiness.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"Gentlemen,

"This warm and affectionate Address from the Inhabitants of the ancient Town and Borough of Gosport is most welcome to my feelings, and I receive with the highest satisfaction these sincere and unfeigned expressions of their loyal and ardent attachment to my Person and Government."

Copy of a Letter from Lieutenant William Edward Parry, commanding His Majesty's Ship Hecla (lately employed with the Griper Gun-Brig on a Voyage of Discovery in the Arctic Seas), to John Wilson Croker, Esq. dated His Majesty's Ship Hecla, West Coast of Davis's Strait, Lat. 70 Deg. 41 Min. N. Long. 69 Deg. 17 Min. W. September 5, 1820.

SIR,

I AVAIL myself of an unexpected opportunity by the Lee, of Hull, whaler, to acquaint you, for the information of my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that His Majesty's ships under my orders, succeeded in discovering a passage through Lancaster's Sound into the Polar Sea, and penetrated, during the summer of 1819, as far as the longitude of 112½ deg. west of Greenwich, between the parallels of 74 deg. and 75 deg. north latitude.

In this space twelve islands have been discovered, and named the Islands of New Georgia, in honour of His Majesty. The expedition wintered in a harbour on the south side of the largest of these islands (called Melville Island), in latitude 74 deg. 47 min. N. and longitude 110 deg. 47 min. W. and proceeded to the westward immediately on the breaking up of the ice at the commencement of the present season, the ships being in perfect condition, dition, the Officers and men in excellent health, and with every prospect of the final accomplishment of our enterprize.

At the south west end of Melville Island, however, the quantity and magnitude of the ice was found to increase so much, that for sixteen days (being above one-third of the whole navigable season in that part of the Polar Sea), it was found impossible to penetrate to the westward beyond the Meridian of 113 deg. 47 min. W.; in order, therefore, that no time might be lost, I determined to try what could be done in a more southern latitude, and for that purpose, ran back along the edge of the ice which had hitherto formed a continuous barrier to the south of us, in order to look out for any opening which might favour the plan I had in view; in this endeavour I was also disappointed, and the season being so far advanced as to make it a matter of question whether, with the remaining resources, the object of the enterprize could now be persevered in, with any hope of success; I consulted the principal Officers of the expedition, who were unanimously of opinion that nothing more could be done, and that it was, on that account, adviseable to return to England.

In this opinion it was impossible for me, under existing circumstances, not to concur, and I trust that the detailed account of our proceedings, which I shall shortly have the honour to lay before their Lordships, will prove highly satisfactory, and that, though our exertions have not been crowned with complete success, they will not be found discreditable to the naval honour of our country.

I beg you will be pleased to acquaint their Lordships, that having proposed to survey the west coast of Davis's Straits, previous to my return, and being desirous of losing as little as possible of the remaining part of the present season, which is favourable for the navigation of these seas, I have not considered dered it right to detain the expedition for the purpose of transmitting by the Lee, a more full account of this voyage; I shall only, therefore, add that having accomplished the object now in view, I hope to reach England by the first week in November.

I have the honour to be, &c.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, humbly approach your Throne, to tender to your Majesty the special homage of a devoted loyalty and attachment to your Majesty's Royal Person and Government.

Sir, we behold with deep concern the increasing prevalence, in some of your Majesty's subjects, of a spirit and temper of bitter hostility against the blessings which we hold most dear, and which we have now the happiness to enjoy under your Majesty's paternal sway.

Convinced by accumulated evidence of the existence and growth of this pernicious spirit, under its most degrading forms of faction, sedition, and treason in the State; and of profaneness, infidelity and blasphemy in religion, we observe with much more pain than surprize the system of operations pursued with unwearied perseverance in subordination to and alliance with the same baneful principles; a system of odious reviling and calumnious insult, heedless of truth, poured forth against all that is honourable and venerable amongst us, in per-

person, rank, office and institution; against all constituted authority; against the motives and conduct of public men; against both Houses of Parliament; against the administration of the laws, and the Officers of Justice; against the ordinances and Ministers of our Christian Faith; and finally, against your Majesty's sacred Person and Government. The tendency of these proceedings, and their result, if left uncontrolled, cannot be contemplated without dismay; being nothing less than the disgrace, ruin and downfall of our country, to be brought about for the gratification of the basest, most malignant, and most corrupt passions of the human heart. And though we devoutly trust that an issue so calamitous will be averted, through the rising disgust and abhorrence of good men, through the vigour of your Majesty's Government, and by the Protecting Arm of Almighty God; yet the rapid progress has become but too apparent, of a power and influence which domineers with lamentable success over the minds of multitudes of your Majesty's deluded subjects, and threatens destruction to their best interests.

Such being the circumstances of our country, we confess, Sir, that we could not remain longer silent without acute feelings of self reproach. We are sensible that your Majesty has claims upon us, and upon all your faithful and loving subjects; claims to be assured, that amid the anxious and arduous cares of government, you possess the affectionate sympathy and the determined, loyal attachment of your people.

We come, therefore, to avow before your Majesty our utter detestation of the principles and practices of infidelity and faction, and to declare that it is to the wisdom and energy of your Majesty's Councils that we look for rescue, under Providence, from the impending dangers.

For ourselves, we entreat your Majesty to believe that we shall not be wanting on our part in any exertions, which the exigences of the times may require, and your Majesty may be pleased to call for at our hands: and with respect to that which, under your Majesty's fostering care, has been and is the object of our constant pursuit, habitual solicitude, and perpetual obligation, we assure your Majesty that there are no lessons so grateful to us, to convey to the youth who are intrusted to our care, as those which inculcate a reverence for your Majesty's Person; an attachment to the institutions of our country, and to its free and glorious Constitution; and, above all, a devout, profound veneration for our Holy Religion.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I thank you for this loyal and dutiful Address.

"Whilst the most wicked and daring efforts have been unremittingly used to spread infidelity and sedition throughout my Kingdom, I have felt a perfect conviction that in our Academical Establishments such efforts would not only prove abortive, but would be regarded with the strongest sentiments of disgust and reprobation.

"The manner in which the University of Cambridge has justified this confidence, has afforded me the highest satisfaction.

"I am well assured that you will persevere with unabated zeal in cherishing and inculcating a pious reverence for our Holy Religion, and a just sense of the inestimable blessings which are derived from the Laws and Constitution of the Country.

"You may rely on my firm determination to protect and uphold your venerable institutions, in the stability of which are deeply involved the preservation and security of all that is dear and valuable to us as a Nation."

They

They were all most graciously received, and the Delegates had the honour of kissing His Majesty's hand.

Carlton-House, December 8, 1820.

THIS day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs and Officers of the City of London waited upon His Majesty with the following Address, which was read by Sir John Silvester, Bart., the Recorder.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The dutiful and loyal Address of the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London, approach your Royal Presence with renewed assurances of our most inviolate attachment to your sacred Person and Government.

Impressed as we are with veneration for your Majesty's Crown and dignity, we view with horror and detestation the unprincipled efforts of the disaffected in every direction which infatuated malice can devise and a licentious press promote, to withdraw the unwary and timid from their allegiance to their Sovereign, and in the result to overwhelm this free and happy land with anarchy and confusion.

For this base purpose, calumnies of the most mischievous tendency have been circulated against all the Constituted Authorities of the Realm, with restless and unabating rancour: the Parliament, the Courts of Judicature, the Altar and the Throne, as established by our envied and glorious Constitution, have become the objects of the most profligate abuse and insulting derision.

We feel, Sire, that in order to avert the devastation threatened by such a torrent of impiety and sedition it becomes the bounden duty of all the liege subjects of the Realm to stand forward, without delay, and avow their determination to support the principles of the British Constitution, in the true spirit of British loyalty, to rally round the Throne and guard the Religion and Laws of the Country from outrage and insult.

The Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London are therefore most anxious, Sire, to testify to the country at large, in this evil hour, their resolution to defend the Monarchy, as well as the other branches of the Constitution, against the attempts openly and industriously made by the instigators and abettors of sedition and infidelity; and to do their utmost endeavour in their respective stations, as Magistrates under the sanction of the laws, to transmit to their children's children the blessings they have derived from the wisdom and bravery of their Ancestors, and which they enjoy under your Majesty's paternal sway.

We beg to add our most fervent prayers to the Almighty Disposer of all events, that your Majesty's reign may be long, prosperous, and happy in the affections of a faithful, grateful, and loyal people.

Signed, by order of Court,
Henry Woodthorpe.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I return you my warmest thanks for this loyal and dutiful Address.

"It is peculiarly gratifying to me to receive at this this time such an assurance of your unshaken attachment to my Person and Government, and of the feelings with which you regard the attempts so unceasingly made to extirpate all that has hitherto been held sacred amongst us, and to destroy all the sources of British freedom, prosperity and power.

"A spirit similar to that by which you are actuated, happily predominates throughout the kingdom; and I well know the implicit confidence which is due to the virtue and loyalty of the great body of the nation, who are manifesting their just sense of the blessings they enjoy, by the most decisive proofs of their zealous determination to defend and preserve them.

"You may rely on my constant support in the discharge of the duties which arise out of the present extraordinary conjuncture.

"We are engaged in a common cause, and I feel most deeply, that the honour of my Crown and the happiness of my reign are inseparably interwoven with the maintenance of our established Constitution, and with the true interests and welfare of my people."

They were all very graciously received and had the honour of kissing His Majesty's hand.

To

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, beg leave to approach your Majesty with renewed assurances of unviolable attachment to your Majesty's Person, Family and Government.

Having so recently been permitted to lay those assurances at the foot of your Majesty's Throne, we should have been content to cherish in ourselves, and to inculcate upon others, the principles of allegiance to our Sovereign, and of reverence for the laws, if it were not that disaffection has assumed a new form, and is endeavouring by the excitement of popular feeling, to accomplish those objects for which it has hitherto laboured in vain.

It is with the deepest sense of gratitude, we acknowledge, that your Majesty's rule has been uniformly exercised in the true spirit of our Laws and Constitution, tempering justice with mercy; and that the happy result of such rule has hitherto been that tranquility, which is not more essential to the objects of our local institutions than to the general interests of the community: not more necessary to the peaceful prosecution of our studies, than to the security of property and the enjoyment of life. With the greater abhorrence therefore we view the insidious designs and evil practices of those, who omit no opportunity of spreading discontent and disloyalty throughout your Majesty's dominions.

We further beg leave to assure your Majesty, that it shall be our constant aim, as it is our indispensable duty, to impress the minds of the rising generation with the same sentiments of dutiful submission to the Sovereign which we ourselves profess; and that we shall endeavour to keep alive,

in

in this your Majesty's highly favoured University, that unfeigned loyalty for which it has been so long distinguished; that attachment to your Majesty's Person which is inseparable from a recollection of the benefits which your Majesty has conferred upon us; and a zealous and unalterable resolution to defend that Constitution, which the voice of civilized Europe as well as the history of our own country proclaims to be the best that has been yet formed for public and private happiness.

Given at our House of Convocation, under our common seal, this 9th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1820.

To which Address His Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious answer:

"I thank you for your loyal and dutiful Address.

"This declaration of your principles, and of the feelings with which you are impressed, at the present important conjuncture, is not less honourable to you, than satisfactory to myself.

"It is by such manifestations of loyalty and public spirit, combined with a strict execution of the laws, that an effectual check will be given to the efforts of those who labour with unceasing industry to corrupt, inflame and pervert the minds of my faithful subjects, to deprive them of the salutary restraints and the consolations of religion, and to subvert all those establishments and institutions which have so long been regarded with affectionate veneration in this country, and with admiration throughout the world.

"In the exercise of the great trust committed to my charge, I shall be invariably actuated by the deepest conviction that the true interests of my Crown are inseparably united with those of my people; and I am fully persuaded that in your se-several stations, it will be your chief object and constant endeavour, to afford to your country the best and surest means of permanent tranquility and prosperity, by encouraging and inculcating a profound reverence for our holy religion, a zealous attachment to our invaluable Constitution, and a firm determination to transmit it unimpaired to our latest descendants."

They were all most graciously received, and the Delegates had the honour of kissing His Majesty's hand.

At the Court at Carlton-House, the 19th of December 1820,

PRESENT,

The KING's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

HIS Majesty having been pleased to appoint His Grace Arthur Duke of Wellington, K. G. to be Lord Lieutenant of the county of Southampton, and of the town of Southampton and county of the same; His Grace, this day, took the oaths appointed to be taken thereupon, instead of the oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy.

Carlton-House, December 19, 1820.
